LEADERSHIP ACADEMY 2008
The Rule of Law
By Bill Conger

Law Day is May 1, and the American Bar Association theme this year is the Rule of Law. This theme is particularly important now as we witness the events in Pakistan where the government of Pervez Musharraf suspends the constitution, puts the sitting Supreme Court under house arrest, installs its own justices and arrests scores of protesting lawyers. In our own country, we are beset by serious threats to the independence of our judiciary, a rising population of persons who are denied access to justice because they cannot afford it and the existence of too many laws that are biased toward special interests.

The term “rule of law” is one that many of us, and not just lawyers, use so often but never really understand its meaning. Since it sounds like a good principle, many use the term to legitimize a particular belief about the correctness of a law. Such was the case recently when the John Birch Society and other groups staged what they called a “Rule of Law Rally” in support of House Bill 1804 — the immigration bill. That is not what the rule of law means to me. The rule of law is a concept.

I have read many definitions of the rule of law. Many are substantially similar, but I believe the working definition provided by the World Justice Project captures the concept in its broadest sense and in the most succinct way. The rule of law compromises four universal principles:

1. A system of self-government in which all persons, including the government, are accountable under the law;
2. A system based on fair, publicized, broadly understood and stable laws;
3. A fair, robust and accessible legal process in which rights and responsibilities based in law are enforced impartially;
4. Diverse, competent, independent and ethical lawyers and judges.

Because their principles are universal, they matter to all of us who make up our community — the clergy, teachers, doctors, lawyers, business people, police, fire department, the military — in essence all fields of endeavors. As ABA President William Neukom so aptly states, “The Rule of Law is a framework guiding the relationship of citizens with our fellow citizens, of citizens with their governments and of governments with other governments. It is nothing less than the essential foundation of communities of equity and opportunity of any scale and any location. There can be no social justice without simple justice — the rule of law.”

OBA HOLDS CONFERENCE

In order to increase more awareness of how the absence of an adequate rule of law infrastructure consigns billions of people to lives characterized by violence, poverty, corruption, ignorance and poor health and to promote better awareness of the importance of the rule of law across all segments of society, the Oklahoma Bar Association sponsored a Rule of Law Conference on April 11 at the Meinders School of Business at Oklahoma City University. The conference was an educational event and included, by invitation only, leaders from diverse sectors and disciplines, such as government, business, law, medicine, the clergy, media and law enforcement. We are excited to be a part of this initiative.

Oklahoma has always celebrated Law Day in a big way. Annual art and writing contests, an informative TV show and 12 nonstop hours of free legal advice have been the foundation of this state’s big day for the legal community. It’s our way to show the public the important work we as lawyers do daily. And this year marks the 30th anniversary for the Ask A Lawyer project, an essential element of Oklahoma’s Law Day activities. This year also celebrates the 50th anniversary of Law Day nationally, which was developed by Wewoka attorney Hicks Epton. The OBA Law Day Committee is very proud of these traditions carried out every May 1.

ASK A LAWYER TV SHOW

This year’s Ask A Lawyer television program will air May 1 at 7 p.m. on OETA stations across the state. A series of segments will be shown during the hour to provide a glimpse into Oklahoma’s legal community.

This year’s show highlights several current issues in the legal world and what Oklahoma lawyers are doing to make a difference. Viewers will hear about one man’s journey through the state’s mental health court system and how he’s gone from being a drug addict to a caring grandfather. Pet owners should be interested in the show’s “animal law” segment, which explains how to ensure that a pet is cared for should its owner pass away. The show will also touch on the tort reform issue by featuring a mother who took action after her son was killed as a result of a vehicle defect.

CONTESTS AND ACTIVITIES

This year we continued to offer expanded activities and contests for school-aged children. The Law Day theme this year is, “Elections: Democracy in Action.” The committee offers a wide variety of contests, and this year more than 1,600 students from across Oklahoma submitted entries in the OBA Law Day contests. The winners have been announced, and they can be viewed at www.okbar.org and on page 812 of this issue.

In addition to the contests, we also targeted ninth and tenth graders with an online citizenship test. This is a 25-question, multiple-choice quiz using questions taken from the actual U.S. citizenship test. Students automatically receive scores and an explanation about the questions they missed.
High school juniors and seniors were encouraged to learn more about how the law changes after they reach their 18th birthday. On the Law Day Web site, the committee has provided the Legal Guide for Young Adults in Oklahoma, which is prepared by the OBA’s Law-related Education Committee.

FREE LEGAL ADVICE

Final preparations are under way for the statewide Ask A Lawyer call-in event, to be held May 1. This may be one of the best ways all Oklahoma bar members can participate in the national celebration of Law Day. This annual event gives us a unique opportunity to provide a valuable community service while promoting positive public relations for bar members.

Callers statewide will be able to reach an attorney by calling (800) 456-8525 throughout the day on May 1. The OBA and the committee work with each county Law Day chairperson in setting up a network of local phone numbers so that those who prefer to speak to a local attorney will be able to see and call those numbers during the broadcast. Volunteer attorneys in each participating county staff the phones and answer questions for a predetermined time period. Oklahoma and Tulsa County attorneys work together to staff the toll-free, statewide phone number from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

To make this community service project a success, the Law Day Committee needs your help. It takes a total of 30 attorneys for each two-hour shift to fully staff the statewide number. That effort, combined with the local county bars creates a huge need for attorneys to step forward. To volunteer in Oklahoma County, contact Connie Creed at (405) 236-8421, or send e-mail to ccreed@okcbar.org. In Tulsa County, contact Jason Bashforth, (918) 591-5296, e-mail jbashforth@dsoa.com or Dan Crawford, (918) 749-8400, e-mail liondc@gmail.com. Those of you wishing to volunteer in other counties should call your Law Day chairperson. You can find that person’s name in the related story in this issue. Phone banks are located at the OETA studios in Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

The Law Day Committee has again committed to branch out to the Latino community by offering free legal advice in Spanish. Each shift in Tulsa and Oklahoma City will need Spanish-speaking volunteers. If you speak Spanish or know non-attorneys who would volunteer to translate, we need your help!

DIRECTIVE AND PROCLAMATION

Another important aspect of Law Day includes a directive, which this year was signed by Oklahoma Supreme Court Chief Justice James Winchester on Feb. 22. By signing the directive, the chief justice encourages courts to host Law Day events. This year, nearly all of our contest first-place winners were present to have their photos taken with Chief Justice Winchester and OBA President Bill Conger. We once again filmed a segment with the chief justice talking to the contest winners about this year’s theme and fielding questions from the students. Also, this year Gov. Brad Henry has signed a proclamation designating May 1, 2008, as Law Day in Oklahoma.

GET INVOLVED!

We hope all of you will participate in some way in Law Day, whether it’s volunteering to provide free legal advice in your county, making a presentation to a local school group or organization or joining us on the Law Day Committee. Planning for the 2009 celebration begins almost as soon as the 2008 celebration ends, and we need your ideas! If you’d like to join this fun, yet very hardworking committee, contact me at (405) 601-2222 or e-mail me at giovanni.perry@cox.net. We would love for you to join us. Happy Law Day!

Law Day 2008 Contest Winners

“Elections: Democracy in Action”

The OBA Law Day Committee would like to thank Oklahoma educators, students and their families for participating in the 2008 Law Day contests. More than 1,600 entries were received from across the state.

This year’s theme, “Elections: Democracy in Action,” encouraged children to learn about the importance of elections and the value of democracy.

Art contests were offered to the younger students. The coloring contests for pre-kindergarteners, kindergarteners and transitional first graders were again a tremendous success. More than half of the total entries were coloring contest entries. First and second grade students could enter a drawing contest, while third and fourth graders could create a collage. Fifth through eighth graders could choose between entering a diorama or creative writing.

The creative free for all category for ninth through 12th graders invited students to use their imaginations and choose any medium to demonstrate the Law Day theme. The students took on the challenge and came through with outstanding results: some examples were pastel drawings, creative writing and performing original songs.

One student was designated the “grand prize winner” for having submitted the best overall entry from all grades.

Finally, two fun activities were available for high school students: an online quiz based on the actual U.S. citizenship test, and the Legal Guide for Young Adults in Oklahoma, which helps teenagers understand the rights and responsibilities that they are granted upon reaching their 18th birthday. Teachers were given access to a test over the guide online.

County bar associations will officially present the contest winners in their county with plaques and prize money later this school year.

The Oklahoma Bar Journal is proud to present the 2008 contest winners...

The Day Joel Chose the President

It was a cold, crisp day on November 2, 2008, the day of the presidential election. Joel, our hero, who woke up and said to himself, “It is time to vote for the president;” Joel got dressed and was walking down the road thinking to himself, “Maybe I’ll vote for the democrat.” He kept walking very contentedly but then thought, “Never mind, democrats are socialists. I’ll vote for the republican.” But then he remembered that Alvin Yakatory, the republican candidate, wanted to keep the rich people rich and the poor people poor. Then he thought he would vote for Jason Steelflex, the democratic candidate.

Then he remembered that Jason wanted to have illegal immigrants pour into the U.S.A. and then try to give them voting rights. Not only does that increase the population but it also increases the rate of crime. Now, with that explanation, Joel really wanted to vote for the republican. But then he remembered that republicans didn’t have the same heart for people as the democrats did.

Joel was pondering both sides very carefully. He thought things like, “Jason Steelflex has views on anti-abortion that I like but he owns several yachts and won’t give any support to people that are not as privileged. On the other hand, Alvin Yakatory is supporting food stamps.”

He didn’t know who to vote for. He arrived at the voting booth. He weighed all the advantages and disadvantages of the candidates. In the end, he had carefully made sure that his vote would be the right one. He had beads of sweat streaming down his face. After ten minutes he voted for...Clum See Boy, the libertarian! California chose Libertarian candidate Mr. Boy by one vote!

Two months later, Clum was being sworn into office, Joel was watching this on the news. Clum said, “A special thanks to Joel Harkett, I heard he cast the last vote in California, swinging the Electoral College our way.” That was how Joel chose the president.

The Fight

Once upon a time, there was an elephant and a donkey. They were rich rulers in their countries. They were well known and proud of it.

The two animals immigrated to America. They were ready to take over, to change the country. When they got there, they got a big surprise! They found that they had to be chosen by the citizens. They couldn’t believe they had to “fight” each other, but other candidates.

The battle was on! The candidates’ blood ran hot. They argued, they gave out things such as buttons and stickers, they shook hundreds of hands, spoke at numerous luncheons, and they argued some more! One day, in a candidate debate, the donkey said, “Who would want such a fat leader? Bray. Our children are not safe. He could step on them!”

Then the elephant said, “Hey, I would talk! I’m not the one who brays every time I talk!” The room got quiet. The other animals just sat there praying and hoping no one would say anything to them.

The time came for the people to decide. One by one, animal by animal, herd by herd, they came to vote. The votes were counted at the end of the day. The top two candidates would go on to run in the final round. After all the votes were in the winners were announced. “And the winner is…The elephant and the donkey!”

The donkey and the elephant were tired of all the negative campaigning. In fact, they had become fond of each other. Each felt the other would be a better leader. You will never guess what happened next. The donkey and the elephant joined together to form one party. They called themselves the “Elekey Party.”

Today’s parties – Democrats and Republicans, might have the mascots they do because of the way these animals acted. Maybe today’s candidates could learn a thing or two from the donkey and elephant in this story. Taking the best parts of both parties and making one great one may be the answer.

How America Gained Its Freedom

Today we have the right
To vote for whom we chose
To be the ruler of our country
Until the next election

Yet this was not always so
Americans are free of Kings
After years of bloody fighting
In the war against England
Our men cold and weary
Willingly fought the British

Paul Revere and William Dawes
Rode endlessly through the night
To warn America of the advancing British
And rushing to the field
With their muskets in hand
Came the Minutemen

The Lobsterbacks kept coming
And our men stood their ground
Until a shot rang through the air
And when the smoke finally
They saw the bodies of men lost
Oh, the horrors of that day

We were suddenly plunged into war
And at Bunker Hill the words of Colonel Prescott rang true:
“Hold your fire until you see the whites of their eyes”
We lost that battle even though they listened to the Colonel
And we lost many more in time

But when Washington attacked Trenton
Crossing the Delaware on Christmas night
Victory was assured
For the enemies were still jolly and merry
Later Princeton fell to our cunning General as well

At Saratoga we had another victory
Our men were scattered thorough the fields
Until Benedict Arnold rallied them together

Soon the British marched past us hands raised
And at Valley Forge the Marquis de Lafayette
And Baron von Steuben trained the army
Then our soldiers marched to and fro professionally
Then we were a match for the British

Soon we persuaded the French to join our cause
General Rochambeau arrived with men and arms
Giving us more naval power
To foil to the British at sea

Finally the war came to a close
At Yorktown the British were surrounded
The Americans cut-off all land escape routes
While the French Navy cut them off by sea
The British food and ammunition ran low
And one morning when the sun rose—a glorious sight

The white flag came toward the American’s battlements
General Cornwallis surrendered
Which brought the war to an end
Making America a free and independent nation

Now in this free country
We must take advantage of our liberty
And vote for leaders
Who will guide our nation
Through times of war and peace

The Death of Democracy

One year, not so very far in the future from now, Democracy died. At his wake, many citizens lined up to walk by his coffin and mourn. They sadly commented, “Wow, he was so young. He should have lived much longer. It was wonderful when he was alive.” And “I never suspected that death could happen so fast. I would have done anything to keep him alive. What will we do without Democracy?”

An old man in a tattered coat stood by the coffin long after most of the others had left. This man, once well known but now almost anonymous to most, was a very close friend of Democracy. He might have been the only one at the wake who truly understood what a terrible tragedy had occurred.

“Old friend,” whispered Election. “I tried so hard to keep you alive. Earlier this year, not one single person had voted in any election, not even the candidates who were running.” It was not just the big Presidential elections that bored voters; gradually voters ignored the elections for every official in the United States. Of course, there were many reasons for the decline. Some people said that they were all sure that someone else would vote. Others had more important things to do than vote, or believed their one vote could not have a real impact. Without participatory elections, the people of the United States did not fulfill their patriotic duty to responsibly choose their leaders. The leaders that direct our country must be elected by the people to stand for the people if they are to act for the good of the citizens of the United States. Elections are the key to giving the people of the United States what they really want and need.

Once adults ignored the simple tasks of registering, becoming informed, and going to the poles to vote, it became easier for selfish people with personal agendas to come to power in our country. As one election after another passed with gradually declining turnout at the poles, Democracy gradually became weaker. Democracy still could have been saved if people realized their error and changed their ways, for a vigorous electoral process was the only medicine that democracy really needed. Americans just would not or could not grasp that elections are democracy in action, and without elections, life as we know it would drastically change. As Democracy realized that Americans possessed the tremendous freedom to vote but could not bother to do it, he gradually lost the will to live.

In this time in the future when the mourners gathered for Democracy’s farewell, the present government had decided that Americans did not need to have any say in their elections. These foolish citizens once thought that elections were not very important in their lives, but now they realized how wrong they were. People angrily commented that things were not going well for America and someone should do something about it. They never understood that they were the “someones” who failed to act. So the people at the wake mourned Democracy’s death because they had never realized how much they would miss him when he was gone.

At the end of the wake, Election sadly turned to leave. An old woman stopped him and remarked, “Wait, don’t I know you from somewhere?” Election looked at her for a while before replying, “Yes, but that was a long time ago.” And then he left. He was not seen again in America.

Elections
The peaceful exchange of power,
The power to evoke change,
Change in a nation,
A nation whose voice is heard,
A voice which spans diversity,
A diversity that unifies,
A unification that creates power,
A power that governs the voiced,
The voiced which creates a democracy,
A democracy actioned by elections,
Elections which preserve freedom,
 Freedoms that ensure rights,
Rights that have endured,
Endurance secured through rotation,
Rotation of the public into office,
Offices of influence elected,
Elected controlled by the people,
People choosing their future,
Future generations looking to the past,
The past providing answers,
Answers of democracy and example,
Examples of elections working,
Workers electing winners,
 Winners hoping for reelection,
Reelection based on performance,
Performance altering public opinion,
Opinions based on feelings and facts,
Facts proving effectiveness,
Effectiveness keeping the peace,
Peace continuing with elections,
Elections democracy in action.

Ms. Winters chose to incorporate her interests in fashion and modeling into her Law Day “creative free for all” entry. She sketched out each design and translated them into actual garments by cutting and painting stylized t-shirts. The shirts were created with the Law Day theme at the forefront.

In her entry, Ms. Winters said, “Fashion always makes a statement – each of the original designs takes this one step further, encouraging other students to go and vote, and to vote in style!”

For purposes of this article, a “pre-dispute arbitration clause in an attorney/client agreement” is an agreement entered into at the formation of the attorney/client relationship requiring that all disputes between the attorney and client, including malpractice claims, be resolved through binding arbitration. This article will explore these issues in the context of Oklahoma law and ethics and will conclude with thoughts regarding the appropriateness of the use of pre-dispute arbitration agreements by Oklahoma lawyers and their clients.

ETHICAL CONSIDERATIONS

In 2000 the Oklahoma Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee was asked to address the issue of pre-dispute arbitration clauses premised on the following hypothetical: “Lawyer ‘A’ provides a retainer agreement to his client containing a clause that all disputes ‘arising under the retainer agreement’ shall be subject to binding arbitration.” In an ethics opinion issued Aug. 18, 2000, the committee concluded, subject to the ultimate decision by the Oklahoma Supreme Court, that arbitration clauses in attorney/fee agreements are valid under Oklahoma substantive law, that the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct do not prohibit pre-dispute clauses in attorney/client agreements provided: 1) the attorney, after full disclosure, ensures that the client has given informed consent to the arbitration provision and 2) it does not encompass disciplinary complaints or proceedings against the attorney.1

The analysis of the committee centered on several factors: 1) the enforceability of arbitration clauses and the applicability of the Oklahoma Uniform Arbitration Act (OUAA); 2) the duty of loyalty to the client and informed consent to arbitration and 3) the scope of the arbitration clause.2 With respect to enforceability issues, the committee pointed out that under the OUAA,3 parties to contracts (other than collective bargaining agreements and insurance contracts) are allowed to enter into written arbitration agreements which are “valid, enforceable and irrevocable, except upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.”4 The committee also emphasized the strong public policy in Oklahoma favoring arbitration as declared by the Oklahoma Supreme Court.5 Acknowledging that arbitration is an effective dispute resolution method between attorneys and their clients and pointing out that one of the comments to Rule 1.5 of the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct recommends consideration of arbitration or mediation of fee disputes, the committee noted that care must be taken to ensure compliance with ethical requirements in the consideration of mandatory arbitration clauses in attorney/client agreements; particularly the duty of loyalty and the requirement that the client give informed consent to arbitration. The committee noted that the attorney’s duty of loyalty to the client requires that the self-interest of the lawyer not be allowed to have an adverse impact on the representation of the client. Further, the attorney’s fiduciary obligation requires the avoidance of overreaching or exploitation of superior knowledge of the legal system to the detriment of the client. The committee also invoked the language of Rule 1.8(a) to implicate the conflict of interest rules in circumstances where a binding arbitration clause is being considered in the context of an attorney/client agreement. The committee found that the lawyer’s duty in regard to arbitration clauses extends to assuring the informed consent of the client to the inclusion of an arbitration clause as well as the concomitant responsibility on the part of the attorney to “explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.” Finally, the committee pointed out that the arbitration agreement itself must be fair and reasonable to the client in light of Rule 1.8 and the appurtenant comments.

After discussing the duty of loyalty and the requirement of informed consent, the committee addressed three particular areas of concern: waiver of the right to a jury trial, level of the sophistication of the client and consultation with independent counsel. The committee expressed concern that any client being asked to enter into an arbitration agreement with an attorney must be made to understand the significant differences between arbitration and litigation including: lack of a jury trial; differences in cost and timing; extent of discovery; and availability of relief, appellate review and a public forum. The level of client sophistication was another consideration the committee felt important in connection with the nature and extent of the attorney’s required disclosure. The committee saw similarities between dealing with an unsophisticated client and one under a disability, with both circumstances calling for a more careful and detailed explanation of the arbitration process and placing the burden on the attorney to provide whatever information is needed so that the client understands the consequences of the arbitration provision. The need for independent counsel was also addressed in this advisory opinion. Rejecting contrary opinions from other jurisdictions, the committee saw no need to require independent counsel prior to the execution of an attorney/client agreement containing a binding arbitration clause. However, it did recommend giving the client the opportunity to consult with independent counsel, noting that advising of the potential desirability of this separate consultation would provide an additional safeguard to the process of obtaining informed consent.

The Oklahoma Bar Association Legal Ethics Committee advised simplicity and clarity in the drafting of arbitration clauses. The committee addressed certain specifics regarding the scope of arbitration clauses, declaring that disciplinary proceedings against attorneys cannot be the subject of an arbitration clause. Further, pursuant to Rule 1.8(h), an attorney may not include an arbitration clause that limits the attorney’s liability for malpractice. An arbitration clause which shifts determination of the claim to a different forum does not prospectively limit lawyer liability. Comment [14] to Rule 1.8 of the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct provides:

Agreements prospectively limiting a lawyer’s liability for malpractice are prohibited.

The American Bar Association Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility reached similar conclusions, declaring that a provision in an attorney/client agreement that requiring binding arbitration of both fee and malpractice disputes is permissible, provided the client is fully apprised of the advantages and disadvantages of arbitration and has given informed consent to inclusion of the arbitration provision. The ABA committee’s analysis centered on two primary issues: 1) whether the requirement of binding arbitration prospectively limits the lawyer’s liability in violation of Rule 1.8(h) and, 2) the duty under Rule 1.4(b) to give clients an adequate explanation of matters, such as the risks and benefits of mandatory binding arbitration. Some ethics tribunals have concluded that the differences between arbitration and the judicially supervised process of litigation are so significant that they constitute an attempt to prospectively limit liability. However, the ABA committee opined that mandatory arbitration does not limit a lawyer’s liability, but instead establishes an alternative procedure for resolving such claims. It determined that the fiduciary duty of a lawyer to a client includes the requirement that both the positive and negative aspects of binding arbitration (cost, waiver of right to jury trial, broad discovery and right to appeal) be discussed with the client so that the client can make an informed decision. With that, the ABA committee concluded that as long as: 1) no attempt is made to prospectively limit the liability of the attorney to the client; 2) the client is fully apprised of advantages and disadvantages of arbitration and 3) sufficient information is provided to enable the client to make an informed decision, then it is ethically permissible to include — in a retainer agreement — a binding arbitration provision with respect to both fee disputes and malpractice claims.

OKLAHOMA COMMON LAW

In Rollings v. Thermodyne Industries Inc., a case of first impression, the Oklahoma Supreme Court concluded that an agreement to submit future disputes to arbitration is binding. This ruling was based, in part, on the court’s conclusion that arbitration is to be favored as a matter of public policy. That same year, in Shaffer v. Jeffrey, the Oklahoma Supreme Court addressed several issues regarding arbitration clauses that are included in attorney/client agreements. In Shaffer, a lawyer and his firm were sued by several former clients. They defended on the grounds that the dispute was subject to an arbitration clause. The district court dismissed the lawsuit. The Oklahoma Court of Appeals reversed, directing the entry of an order compelling arbitration. Relying on the holding in Rollings v. Thermodyne Industries Inc. that voluntary agreements to submit future disputes to arbitration (pursuant to the Oklahoma Arbitration Act) are enforceable, the Oklahoma Supreme Court rejected the plaintiff’s arguments that the arbitral provisions in the attorney/client agreements were unconstitutional and unenforceable. Interestingly, the court seemingly reserved judgment on the critical issue, noting: “The parties do not raise, and we do not address, the propriety of an arbitration clause in an attorney fee agreement, or whether circumstances could exist that would void an arbitration clause in an attorney fee agreement.”

In 1991, the U. S. District Court for the District of Colorado addressed these issues under Oklahoma law in the context of a fee dispute and malpractice claim by Guy Grider, a “sophisticated” Oklahoma businessman against his Colorado law firm. The retainer agreement between Grider and the law firm required binding arbitration. The pertinent portion of the parties’ agreement with respect to arbitration stated: “You and [the law firm] agree to submit any fee disputes between us and claims by you regarding [the law firm’s] handling of your matter for binding resolution by the Legal Fees Arbitration Committee of the Colorado Bar Association; except that this does not bar [the law firm] from collecting amounts due it in other ways, including litigation.” In response to a suit filed in the U. S. District Court for the District of Colorado, the defendant law firm sought an order compelling arbitration under the terms of the parties’ agreement and the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA). The district court first concluded that the malpractice claim and fee dispute were within the scope of the arbitration agreement. The court next turned to Grider’s claim that the arbitration clause was unenforceable because: 1) the arbitration clause was fraudulently induced; 2) law firm breached its fiduciary duty to the client; 3) arbitration provisions violated Rule 1.8 of the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct and 4) the arbitration provision was void pursuant to the provisions of Article 23, Section 8 of the Oklahoma Constitution.

With respect to the contention that the arbitration clause was fraudulently induced, the court found that the law firm never misled Grider as to the effect of the arbitration clause; that he understood the arbitration clause and had the opportunity to discuss it with his Oklahoma lawyer.34 The claim that the arbitration clause favored the law firm and should be voided as a breach of fiduciary duty was likewise rejected. The court concluded that the fiduciary duty between the parties arose only after the fee agreement was signed and, subsequently, Grider had failed to establish the creation of an attorney-client relationship prior to that.35 The court also rejected the claim that the arbitration clause violated Oklahoma Rule of Professional Conduct 1.8 (“[a] lawyer shall not make an agreement prospectively limiting the lawyer’s liability to a client for the lawyer’s personal malpractice”) because the arbitration provision did not limit liability but only shifted the forum in which that liability would be determined.36 Finally, the court denied the claim that Article 23, Section 8 of the Oklahoma Constitution (“[a]ny provision of the contract, express or implied, made by any person, by which any of the benefits of this Constitution is sought to be waived, shall be null and void”) precluded enforcement of the arbitration provision in question.37 The court reasoned that the transaction indisputably involved interstate commerce and, as such, the FAA — not Oklahoma law — governed the validity of the agreement to arbitrate; Oklahoma law was only relevant to the extent it should be looked at for general contract law principles.38

CONCLUSION

In Oklahoma, neither legal nor ethical prohibition precludes the use of pre-dispute arbitration clauses in legal services contracts as long as the client is given sufficient information to make an informed decision and no attempt is made to limit the lawyer’s liability. Accordingly, the ultimate decision as to whether arbitration is beneficial and under what circumstances it should be utilized is one which should be left to the good judgment of the parties involved. There are, in fact, substantial ethical, practical and societal considerations to be dealt with given the sensitive nature of the relationship between the attorney and client. Nevertheless, these considerations and concerns over possible abuse should be dealt with on a case by case basis and should not be allowed to deny all parties the freedom to contract regarding the issue of how disputes between them will be resolved.

MEMBER BENEFITS

Vol. 79 — No. 10 — 4/12/2008 The Oklahoma Bar Journal 857
President John F. Kennedy once said, “Leadership and learning are indispensable to each other.” As president of the Oklahoma Bar Association, an attorney and an educator, I am passionate about learning and leadership, and that is why one of the goals of my presidency has been to provide leadership training for tomorrow’s bar leaders.

After a highly successful, two-day OBA Leadership Conference in 2007, I decided to build on that strong foundation by developing a more extensive leadership program. I wanted to provide a continued opportunity to OBA members for leadership training and professional growth and will do so through the 2008-2009 Oklahoma Bar Association Leadership Academy.

The Leadership Academy format will differ from the Leadership Conference. The academy will include fewer people than the Leadership Conference -- about 20 individuals will be selected. However, more training sessions will be offered with the academy. I anticipate that there will be four sessions, beginning in the early fall this year and continuing through June 2009.

If you are selected and attend this program, you will learn what it means to be a leader. You will learn how to communicate, motivate and succeed not only in your law career, but also in service to professional, political, judicial, civic and community organizations. You will also have a chance to meet and interact with prominent legal and community leaders.

It is also of extreme importance to me that the Leadership Academy participants include members of the OBA who are from diverse backgrounds or who have historically been underrepresented in OBA leadership. If you fall within one of these categories, I urge you to consider applying for this opportunity.

My thanks to the Leadership Academy Task Force, led by Bartlesville attorney Linda Thomas and Oklahoma City attorney Laura McConnell Corbyn. The work and continued work of the task force is much appreciated. Task force members are Chris Camp, Martha Rupp Carter, Dietmar Caudle, Charles Chesnut, Robert Farris, Charles Geister, Celeste Johnson, Patrick Layden, Michael Mordy, Jon Parsley, Giovanni Perry, Keri Williams and Judge Richard Woolery.
Mock Trial Volunteers Complete Another Season

The final round of this year’s Oklahoma High School Mock Trial Championship featured a previous state champion and a team that had never reached the finals – Del City’s Christian Heritage Academy and Clinton High School. At the Bell Courtroom at the OU Law Center on March 4, Christian Heritage Academy defeated Clinton for the honor of representing Oklahoma at the National High School Mock Trial Championship to be held in Wilmington, Del., in May.

The Mock Trial Committee, the Young Lawyers Division and the Oklahoma Bar Foundation wish to express their gratitude to all of those members of the bar who volunteered during this year’s competition.

“Our Mock Trial program owes its success to the hard work of hundreds of attorneys who volunteer their time and efforts as members of the Mock Trial Committee, attorney coaches, trial site coordinators, presiding judges and scoring panelists. Our thanks go out to everyone who volunteered and participated in this year’s competition,” said Mock Trial Committee Chair Rachel McCombs.

The Mock Trial Program, now in its 28th year, would not be possible without the support of the Oklahoma Bar Foundation and the Oklahoma Bar Association.

Out of 51 teams that began competing in January, the top finishers are, in third place, Ada High School; fourth, Jenks High School; fifth, Catoosa High School; sixth, Atoka High School; seventh, Holland Hall, Tulsa; and eighth, Broken Arrow High School.

This year’s Mock Trial Committee members are Chairperson Rachel McCombs; Executive Vice Chairperson Jennifer Bruner; Immediate Past Chairperson Jennifer Scott Moradi; Vice Chairperson/ Oklahoma City Trial Site Coordinator Erin Moore; Vice Chairperson/Tulsa Trial Site Coordinator Marsha Rogers; Vice Chairpersons Case Development Marsha Rogers, Nicole M. Longwell and Christine Cave; and Mock Trial Coordinator Judy Spencer. Other Mock Trial Committee members are Julie Austin, Dessa Baker-Inman, Jim Buxton, Joe Carson, Christian D. Szlichta, Antonio L. Jeffrey, Scott Inman and Kathryn Walker.
The final round of the competition begins in the Bell Courtroom at the OU College of Law.
Christian Heritage Academy team members pose with their trophy. They were coached by teacher Jerrid Eischen and attorney Chris Box.

I love books. I like to hold them, read them, own them, let them line the shelves as treasures. There was a time when the term “rare book” meant a book that was out of print or that was limited in publication. Now books as paper printed objects seem to be on the downturn. There are now electronic readers and other devices coming on the market that reveal a trend toward books being printed on paper becoming rarer.

I am all for being “green” and letting the electronic age help us save resources. However, there are just some things that should be in a book. Some things that should be available if the computer is down. One of those things that should be in print is the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct. Of course, the official statutory reporter prints these. They are also online at OSCN.net, and they were posted on okbar.org.

You should have received a published copy of the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct. It was thought that a stand alone volume would be a better member service than merely printing them in the Oklahoma Bar Journal. I like the fact that it can be easily shelved and retrieved. Like many of the member services we offer, there is a large amount of unseen work that goes into such a project. Also, a special thanks to our friends at Oklahoma Attorneys Mutual Insurance Co. for helping to defray some of the printing costs.

This publication is the result of more than two year’s work by our Ethics 2000 Committee and countless hours of staff support. After approval by the committee, the OBA Board of Governors took several months to review the rules at its monthly meetings. After that, public hearings were held, and eventually they were approved by the House of Delegates before being sent to the Oklahoma Supreme Court. The committee, under the leadership of Dean Lawrence Hellman and Gary Rife, even provided us with comments.

I got involved in a small way by meeting with one of the mailing services that was vying for our business. Nothing is simple. There are a multiple number of factors to consider in just mailing a publication. Add to that color, size, paper stock, ink color and sending it all out to bid for the best prices.

After the postage deal, I was done. From there Carol and Gina took over and the fine product you see today was possible because of many hours of hard work.

Now that you have this publication in hand, I hope you take time to review it. Although the new rules have been publicized for over a year, my guess is that some of you have not taken the time to sit down and study them. You should read them like your livelihood depends on it — because it does!

A couple of major changes you should pay particular attention to:

Rule 1.15 Trust Account Overdraft Reporting The new rule requires the financial institution to notify the OBA general counsel in the event of an overdraft on a trust account.

Rule 1.17 Sale of a Law Practice This rule now permits a lawyer to sell an “area of practice” if the seller ceases to engage in the practice of law in the geographic area wherein the practice has been conducted. It also expands a lawyer’s ability to cease practicing in an area of law or an area of the state.

Rule 1.18 Duties to Prospective Clients This is an entirely new rule. The rule gives lawyers guidance on when an attorney/client relationship forms with the person seeking legal advice but does not “hire” the attorney.

Many thanks to the members and staff who made this publication a reality. I hope for you that this is not a rare book; but rather, a book that is a useful tool.

‘I Just Need an Answer to a Simple Question.’

By Jim Calloway, Director, OBA Management Assistance Program

“I just need an answer to a simple question.” We have all heard that one.

When it comes from an unfamiliar voice on the telephone in the law office, this phrase roughly translates to “I would like some free legal advice from you, please, and I really have five or six questions, but this is a good way to get you started talking.”

When it comes from one of your school-age children, it means that you are about to play a few rounds of “Are You Smarter than a Fifth Grader: Home Edition.” When it comes from your spouse or significant other, it means you should be ready for a question that is anything but simple, or worse, a question that is simple, but with potential answers that are complex and fraught with peril.

Is there any such thing as a simple question to a professional who might be charged with some sort of liability for answering a question incorrectly?

Well, this month we are not going to cover questions propounded to you. Rather we are going to spend a few minutes discussing how you can get instant answers to most of your simple questions. I hope this month’s readers will find this column to be life changing, even if that change is only giving you an extra five minutes per day.

There’s a lot of value in Solosez. People answer each other’s questions. People post obscure items of interest. People share their lives, sometimes sending extremely personal messages that end up in the inboxes of over 3,300 of their closest friends. If you are interested, you might give Solosez a try. Just don’t subscribe under your primary e-mail account. Because, while there is no charge for Solosez, it is not free. There is a cost in time invested. You will receive hundreds of e-mail messages per day. I firmly believe that the only way you can deal with Solosez in any rational manner is to set up a dedicated Gmail account for Solosez only. Then you can have the flood contained in a separate e-mail account and have the power to search through the pile using Google’s Gmail search tools.

Why am I mentioning Solosez? Because it and all of the other electronic e-mail lists operate the same way. You send an e-mail to one address and it ends up in dozens or hundreds...
One e-mailer’s trash is another’s treasure and every person who has ever subscribed to a list has asked themselves the question, “Why on earth did that person send that question to the entire list?”

One negative aspect of online community interest groups is that people send totally unrelated and undesirable material to the collective. The problem of course is that each of us would define undesirable by our own standards.

The Oklahoma Bar offers OBA-NET free of charge to its members. It is based on the Web board model rather than an electronic mailing list. If the OBA has your e-mail on file, you can register for OBA-NET at www.oba-net.org.

So today I propose an answer to a question that has troubled me for years. Why would that person send that question to hundreds of people via e-mail when they could simply find the answer online themselves?

The irony is that they probably find it themselves as quickly as they can type the question and send the e-mail. So why bother hundreds of others? I have determined that part of the answer to my question is narcissism and laziness. It doesn’t bother some people to force hundreds of others to reach for the delete key if they can get what they need.

But, I now believe that most people simply don’t know they can now get instant answers to almost anything online or they don’t know how.

Many lawyers who can do superb digital legal research for their clients seem to not know how to do other online research. They can easily find precedents and cases, but cannot easily find the flash point of kerosene. (Oh, wait, that’s in 25 Oklahoma Statutes § 34 and the Oklahoma Constitution; bad example.)

So this month, let’s cover how to locate the answers to questions online. (Now I may be about to say things that my highly-trained law librarian wife and other librarians will disagree with, but she stopped reading my column years ago.)

So let’s start where every one of you would likely start anyway, if you thought about it: Google. I’m certainly not against traditional dictionaries. But why would you ever ask hundreds of people what a word or technical term means when you can just type it into Google? You’ve probably noticed that when you search for a single word in Google, right next to the number of results is a link to the definition.

You’ve probably noticed that when you search for a single word in Google, right next to the number of results is a link to the definition.

For example, if I’m tempted to ask the members of my favorite electronic mailing list what exactly “ombudsman” means, I should do a Google search for the word first. OK, I get nine and a quarter mil-

Wikipedia gets a bad rap in the legal community. The idea of a free online “encyclopedia that anyone can edit” just screams non-authoritative to lawyers. Certainly there have been a few well-publicized Wikipedia hoaxes. OK, some librarians should skip the next paragraph.

Wikipedia is a great source of information and all lawyers should be using it regularly, admittedly with a bit of caution. You can find extensive and detailed information on an amazing variety of topics, particularly if you want to understand some new pop culture phenomena or term that may not have even made into print dictionaries or encyclopedias yet. Now it is true that I wouldn’t stake an entire client matter solely on information I found on Wikipedia. But that’s true for most single sources. And even if you want to dismiss Wikipedia as non-authoritative, there’s a good chance that the Wikipedia treatment of a given topic will have links to other Internet resources that you would believe to be authoritative.

And, referring back to my original point, Wikipedia is quite likely to be more authoritative than the e-mails that you receive back in response to a query to an electronic mailing list. Given no other choices, I’d rather cite Wikipedia in a court brief, noting the exact date and time (in case the entry changes) and saving the original page as I found it, than cite “e-mail from Bruce Dorner, Londonderry, NH attorney (Aug. 7, 2008.)” I may know that Bruce is an expert, but will the court?

Wikipedia is the most famous of many, many wikis. (And if you don’t know what a wiki is, there’s a good chance to put this lesson into practice.) Some other wikis of interest include WikiHow, the “how to” wiki at www.wikihow.com, Wex from the Cornell University Law School Legal Information Institute at www.law.cornell.edu/wex and JurisPedia, a worldwide law wiki, http://en.jurispedia.org.

One thing to understand is that popular wikis are quickly self correcting. True, someone may register as an editor and edit in some nonsense or off-the-wall statement. But there is a very good chance that, within a minute, someone else will fix it. Wikipedia is a great source for all sorts of reference material. As I noted in one of my blog posts earlier this year, if you want to see every song that made number one each week on the Billboard 100 for a given year or a recap of the 2000 NCAA football season, Wikipedia should be your first stop.

Wikipedia has been cited in more than a few appellate court opinions, which is probably a surprise to some. A Jan. 29, 2007, New York Times article, “Courts Turn to Wikipedia, but Selectively,” noted that trend. The article is still online at http://tinyurl.com/2xtekf, but the New York Times may still require free registration to access it. Wikipedia also has a table of court opinions citing Wikipedia as a source:

Wikipedia is quite likely to be more authoritative than the e-mails that you receive back in response to a query to an electronic mailing list.

And if you wanted information about a book or song, you wouldn’t want to type just the title of the work into Google, you would want to enclose it with quotation marks so that the results would all have that exact phrase, not just some of the words.

But what about answers to other questions, you might ask? Entering a few search terms into a search engine may get you pages of results, but you really want the answer to a question, not an afternoon schedule of reading Web pages.

You might want to ask “What is the meaning of life?” for example. And, just so you know, Wikipedia does have an information page for that at http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Meaning_of_life.

But here’s a strategy. If you want the answer to a specific question, search for the first part of a sentence that would answer the question, enclosed by quotes. So search for “Niagara Falls is located” or “The death penalty is allowed.” Some times I even play Google Jeopardy, where I enter the question that I want answered enclosed by quotes. This will only give me a response where the author has rhetorically posed the question in the writing, of course. But it works a fair number of times.

Any phrase enclosed by quotes is more likely to get you the results you desire than a few keys words. But if that does not work, remove the quotes and try the same search again. You do have to be more cautious with these narrowly targeted searches and make sure that the Web site promoting the content is trustworthy. There’s probably some blogger somewhere who has posted that Niagara Falls is in Nigeria.

For more on online reference guides and resources, I strongly suggest checking out “Fun and Handy Reference Sites That Rock!” online at www.abanet.org/genpractice/ereport/vol7/num1/sitesforsoreeyes.html or http://tinyurl.com/562chm. My counterpart with the South Carolina Bar, Courtney Kennaday, and I have been writing out column “Sites for Sore Eyes” for the ABA GP|Solo Technology eReport for several months now and we really encourage you to read this last one for some great research sites.

If you want additional training on Internet research, check out the OBA/CLE Advanced Internet Research webinar scheduled for May 13. I will be co-presenting that one with Dallas attorney Tom Mighell, who was chair of ABA TECH-SHOW 2008 and has been a past presenter at our OBA Solo and Small Firm Conference. We’ve got some great information prepared and you can get CLE credit online while seated in your home or office. Get more information or register online at www.okbar.org/cle/2008/2008-05-13seminarID903.htm or http://tinyurl.com/6fyt94.

Now, I know I may be discouraging some from e-mailing certain questions to electronic mailing lists or posting to other online community message boards. I don’t want to do that. For certain types of questions and for seeking the subjective opinions of others, there is simply nothing like a good electronic mailing list, or a Web board like OBA-NET. I get tons of wisdom from these groups of people who are willing to freely share their ideas, their opinions and their information. There has been a good deal of recent business literature written on the wisdom of crowds.

I just don’t want for the only person who had the answer to my question to be the one who dropped out of the group last week after he opened an e-mail asking “What is an ombudsman anyway?” for the fifth time this year.

Representing Disabled Clients
By Gina Hendryx, OBA Ethics Counsel

The adopted changes to the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct include expanded options for the lawyer representing a client with diminished capacity or under a disability. Rule 1.14 now includes lesser restrictive alternatives to seeking a guardianship when the client lacks the capacity to assist in the lawyer-client relationship.

Rule 1.14. Client with Diminished Capacity

(a) When a client’s capacity to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation is diminished, whether because of minority, mental impairment or for some other reason, the lawyer shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal client-lawyer relationship with the client.

(b) When the lawyer reasonably believes that the client has diminished capacity, is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken and cannot adequately act in the client’s own interest, the lawyer may take reasonably necessary protective action, including consulting with individuals or entities that have the ability to take action to protect the client and, in appropriate cases, seeking the appointment of a guardian ad litem, conservator or guardian.

(c) Information relating to the representation of a client with diminished capacity is protected by Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the lawyer is impliedly authorized under Rule 1.6(a) to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent reasonably necessary to protect the client’s interests.

The lawyer has an increased duty to communicate with the impaired client so that the client can make informed decisions as to the scope and objectives of the representation.

The Comment to Rule 1.14 states that “the normal client-lawyer relationship is based on the assumption that the client, when properly advised and assisted, is capable of making decisions about important matters.” A client’s capacity may be diminished due to illness, senility, minority, addiction, medication or a host of other causes. The lawyer should, as much as is reasonably possible, maintain a normal lawyer-client relationship with the impaired client. The lawyer has an increased duty to communicate with the impaired client so that the client can make informed decisions as to the scope and objectives of the representation. The same special duty to communicate arises when deafness or linguistic differences impede client decision-making. See, e.g. People ex rel. Myers v. Briggs, 263 NE2d 109. In Nebraska Bar Association v. Walsh, 294 NW2d 873, a lawyer was disciplined for failure to communicate fully with deaf client so that client could make an informed decision as to whether to file an appeal.

However, when the client has diminished mental capacity, maintaining the normal lawyer-client relationship may be difficult, if not impossible, in some respects. Prior to the adoption of rule changes, lawyers in Oklahoma were limited to seeking the appointment of a guardian when faced with a client under a disability. Initiation of guardianship proceedings... often pitted attorney against client and necessitated the revelation of lawyer-client confidential communications. Rule 1.14 (b) now permits the lawyer to seek reasonably necessary protective action including the less restrictive alternatives of consulting with “individuals or entities that have the ability to take action to protect the client...”.

Many times the issue is concern that someone is taking financial advantage of an elderly or infirm client. Lawyers are reticent to seek the formality of a guardianship based on such suspicions, but were prohibited from voicing their concerns to family members or government agencies. With the adoption of the rule changes, lawyers may now investigate further and seek the assistance of family members, physicians and/or agencies such as Adult Protective Services. When taking protective action pursuant to Rule 1.14 (b), the lawyer should only reveal information about the client to the extent reasonably necessary to protect the client’s interests. Rule 1.14 (c).

Rule 1.14(b) permits the lawyer to seek appointment of a guardian to protect the client’s interests if there is no less drastic alternative. One option the lawyer should consider is a guardian ad litem or a guardian for the purposes of the litigation only. This is less severe than seeking a guardianship over a person and his/her property. The guardian only advises on matters of the litigation and may be discharged at the end of the legal matter.

Whether to seek a guardianship or the appointment of a guardian ad litem should be a considered decision after consultation with the client, the client’s family members, physicians and/or trusted friends.

NOTICE OF CLASS ACTION PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AND HEARING ON SETTLEMENT

TO: All persons who received awards against the Special Indemnity Fund of the State of Oklahoma during the period from January 1, 1987, until May 9, 1996, whose claims were not timely paid, and who did not opt out of this class action, and the surviving spouses and dependent children of such persons.

PLEASE READ THIS NOTICE CAREFULLY. THIS IS NOT A NOTICE OF A LAWSUIT AGAINST YOU. YOU MAY BENEFIT FROM READING THIS NOTICE.

WHAT THIS LAWSUIT IS ABOUT. On October 22, 1993, Jerry D. Dean and James H. Pilkington filed this action on behalf of themselves and others similarly situated against the Special Indemnity Fund of the State of Oklahoma. The Class Representatives alleged that the awards entered against the Special Indemnity Fund during the period from January 1, 1987, until May 9, 1996, were not timely paid, and that the Special Indemnity Fund owed interest and remaining principal on all such awards. The Special Indemnity Fund later became known as the Multiple Injury Trust Fund. The parties have negotiated a proposed settlement.

NO ADMISSION OF LIABILITY. By settling this lawsuit, the Multiple Injury Trust Fund is not admitting that it has any liability to the class members.

THE PROPOSED SETTLEMENT. The proceeds total approximately $71.2 million. Of this total, the Multiple Injury Trust Fund has paid Class Members approximately $54.7 million during the pendency of this action. Under the terms of the settlement, the Multiple Injury Trust Fund will pay up to an additional $9.1 million plus attorneys' and administrators' fees and costs pursuant to the review, approval and supervision of this Court. The attorneys for the class believe that this settlement is fair, reasonable, adequate and in the best interests of the class members. The terms of the settlement are as follows:

1. Benefit. Each class member who is a QUALIFIED CLAIMANT may receive a one time FINAL PAYMENT in an amount up to that which is set out in the following schedule from the MITF Claims Settlement Fund:

   - $700 for a QUALIFIED CLAIMANT whose order awarding material increase benefits in the original underlying claim was filed between January 1, 1989, and December 31, 1993; and
   - $500 for a QUALIFIED CLAIMANT whose order awarding material increase benefits in the original underlying claim was filed between January 1, 1994, and May 9, 1996.

A sum equal to 20% of the amount paid to every QUALIFIED CLAIMANT shall be deducted from said amount and paid by the Multiple Injury Trust Fund in lump sum to the attorney of record who represented that QUALIFIED CLAIMANT in his underlying case against the Special Indemnity Fund.

A QUALIFIED CLAIMANT is defined in the proposed settlement agreement as follows: Any person who received awards against the Special Indemnity Fund of the State of Oklahoma during the period from January 1, 1987, until May 9, 1996, whose claims were not timely paid, and who did not opt out of this class action (“Class Member”), and:

(1) Who is alive on the date of the filing of this Order; or
(2) The surviving spouse (who is alive on the date of the filing of this Order) of a deceased class member; or (3) A surviving dependent child (who is alive on the date of the filing of this Order) of a deceased class member as defined in Title 85 O.S. §48.

2. Release. Each CLASS MEMBER shall be deemed to have fully, finally, and forever released, relinquished and discharged: (A) all Claims against the Multiple Injury Trust Fund (including its respective past and present officers, directors, agents, managers, attorneys, employees, associates, successors or predecessors in interest, and representatives), whether or not such CLASS MEMBER participates in the settlement by providing a claim form; and (B) the Multiple Injury Trust Fund from any and all claims arising out of, relating to, or in connection with the defense of this action. Further, the Multiple Injury Trust Fund shall be deemed to have, fully, finally and forever released, relinquished and discharged each and all of the CLASS MEMBERS, and their Counsel from any and all claims for abuse of process, malicious prosecution or any other claim arising out of, relating to, or in connection with the initiation and prosecution of the action.

3. Class Representative Award, Attorney Fees and Expenses, and Administrators' Fees and Expenses. The Multiple Injury Trust Fund will pay an additional sum of $7,500.00 as a class representative award to both Claimants Dean and Pilkington; a fee of $6.4 million to the Class Action Attorneys as a fair and reasonable fee in satisfaction of their liens and for their efforts in prosecution of this action which has been pending since October 22, 1993 (this represents approximately 8.95% of the total proceeds); reasonable reimbursable costs to the Class Action Attorneys; and the sum of $500,000.00 to the Co-Administrators of the MITF Claims Settlement Fund for fees and expenses incurred in administering claims under this settlement.

CLAIMS PROCESS. Members of the class who believe they are entitled to share in the class recovery MUST complete and submit the PROOF OF ELIGIBILITY FOR PAYMENT and CLAIM FORM provided below postmarked by SEPTEMBER 1, 2008, to the Office of the Administrators at the address set out in the form.

OBF Helps Oklahoma Students Gain Experience in Democracy and the Law

By Renée DeMoss, OBF President

Who was president when the 1964 Civil Rights Act was passed? What year was the Constitutional amendment enacted that gave women the right to vote? These are the types of questions that an alarmingly high number of young Americans students cannot correctly answer. Indeed, the lack of knowledge American students have about U.S. history and the democratic process has been termed a “crisis.”

Another “crisis” said to be facing our country is the enormous need for pro bono service from lawyers. It is estimated that more than 80 percent of the legal needs of persons in the United States with limited income are currently unmet.

Recently the OBF agreed to fund two grant requests that may help address these crises — one that encourages Oklahoma students to learn more about the American democratic process and another that enriches the legal educations of Oklahoma law students by helping them provide pro bono services to those in need. Under an OBF policy that supplies funding in certain circumstances outside the usual grant cycle, the foundation awarded funds to support Norman High School students and law students from the University of Oklahoma College of Law, with projects designed to aid them in learning more about our laws and legal system.

FIRST OBF GRANT AWARDED TO NORMAN HIGH SCHOOL

Norman High recently out-scored other Oklahoma schools to become state champions of the “We the People: the Citizen and the Constitution” competition. The “We The People” program is a nationally acclaimed curriculum that focuses studies of middle and high school students on the history and principles of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights. A recent nation-wide study of the program confirms that students learning this curriculum display significantly greater “political tolerance” and commitment to principles enunciated in the Constitution and Bill of Rights than do students learning through traditional textbooks and teaching methods.

Based on their studies of the “We the People” materials, students first compete in their own classrooms and then with other area schools in simulated congressional hearings, where they evaluate, take and defend positions on historical and contemporary political issues. During the competitions, the students prepare oral presentations and field questions from judges designed to demonstrate their knowledge and understanding of how democracy works in the United States.

The Oklahoma state competition was held at the State Capitol Building and competing teams were ranked by Oklahoma judges. The Norman team advanced to represent Oklahoma in the national competition to be held in Washington, D.C. in May, where they will compete against teams from the other 49 states and the District of Columbia. OBF funding will help send the Norman students to the national competition.

THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA COLLEGE OF LAW PRO BONO PROGRAM “STUDENTS FOR ACCESS TO JUSTICE” RECEIVES SECOND GRANT

The “Students for Access to Justice” program provides OU law students with volunteer opportunities to work on legal issues through internships with Oklahoma organizations, government agencies and courts at every level.

In January 2008, five students from the OU SATJ program traveled to New Orleans to volunteer with the Student Hurricane Network. The Student Hurricane Network is a national network of law students dedicated to advancing the cause of social justice in communities affected by Hurricanes Katrina and Rita.

While there, the students worked with the New Orleans Legal Assistance Corporation by helping attorneys with bankruptcy issues. They also worked with the Louisiana Justice Institute, a non-profit legal advocacy organization created to address the urgent needs poor and minority communities have in rebuilding their neighborhoods. The students completed surveys and informed displaced residents living in Federal Emergency Management Agency trailer parks about rights they have to receive assistance from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Deeply moved by the pro bono work they did in New Orleans, the five OU students returned from New Orleans with a real appreciation for the impact that quality legal assistance can make in the lives of others. With great enthusiasm, those five students motivated 15 more students to forego their spring breaks and go back to New Orleans to continue their pro bono work in this devastated area. The OBF helped fund this worthwhile educational experience for the OU law students.

During this trip, many of the students worked on another project designed by the Louisiana Justice Institute. The students went door to door to every house in the Ward 27 neighborhood to gather information about each house and the legal problems the residents face in rebuilding.

Law students Walt Cromwell, Toby Frisen and Joanne LaFontant had the opportunity to assist an 80 year old gentleman who had worked as a mechanic for the Tuskegee Airmen. He was still living in a FEMA trailer and was battling ailments caused by formaldehyde in the trailer. He was struggling to rebuild his home of 45 years where he had raised his children, and was dealing with rising costs for building materials and the endless red tape involved in obtaining government assistance. Other students helped similar clients negotiate through the myriad roadblocks they faced in obtaining assistance to rebuild their homes. The students were glad for the opportunity to participate in the program, and the lessons learned will serve them well in their future legal careers. Student Mary Walters stated, “The little bit that I was able to give was one of the most rewarding experiences of my life. If everyone gave one week, it would make a huge impact.”

OU law students Brad Wilson and Mike Davis were among those who worked with the Orleans Public Defender’s Office, which represents people accused of committing crimes in the Orleans Parish and who cannot afford private attorneys. Mr. Davis assisted the office in updating files, organizing case loads and ensuring that no one slipped through the cracks by failing to be assigned an attorney. Mr. Wilson conducted interviews with five inmates at the Orleans Parish Prison to obtain information about the facts of their cases and their criminal histories and to familiarize them with the procedures followed by the Orleans Public Defenders Office. He also worked with a student studying social work to conduct psychosocial assessments to determine if the five inmates required treatment for post traumatic stress, substance abuse or other health related problems. Mr. Wilson is interested in criminal defense work and enjoyed learning the holistic approach of the Orleans Public Defenders Office. “I hope the work we did will not only help the inmates get fair and just treatment in the legal system but will also get them the help they need to stay clean and out of the system.”

You can be a part of the initiative to help Oklahoma students gain valuable experiences like these through membership in the OBF Fellows program and through other general contributions. Join with other Oklahoma attorneys and help us to make a real improvement in the lives of others by completing the Fellow enrollment form that follows. Annual Fellow payments of only $100 still go a long way and help many diverse law-related programs!

Meeting the Need

By Lynn Elliott Gaither

One year ago a group of attorneys met in Oklahoma City for an evening reception celebrating the beginning of Trinity Legal Clinic of Oklahoma Inc. The next day, more than 20 attorneys and law students gathered for training sessions on criminal law, immigration law and family law. These same attorneys, plus those who have joined along the way, have provided well over 250 hours of free legal services and served approximately 150 indigent persons in Oklahoma City who otherwise would not have had timely access to legal counsel.

Trinity Legal is an Oklahoma not-for-profit corporation funded by donations from attorneys and others interested in helping the poor with their legal needs. The clinic model is designed to maximize resources, to minimize inefficiency and to empower volunteer attorneys to make the most of their commitment of time and talent. Instead of using resources to operate a bricks-and-mortar facility, Trinity Legal partners with existing community organizations. The clinic operates within the partner organizations’ facilities and serves the partner organizations’ clients.

The partner organizations assist with initial client intake and financial eligibility screening. Trinity Legal’s first two partner organizations are City Rescue Mission and Cross and Crown Mission, both in Oklahoma City. Discussions are ongoing for adding additional “partnerships” at other locations.

This clinic model also ensures clients are served in a comprehensive manner. Indigent clients needing help with child support enforcement often also need assistance in feeding and clothing their children. Cross and Crown Mission has programs to provide this assistance. Homeless clients with outstanding warrants for failing to report to their probation officer often need an addiction recovery program. City Rescue Mission provides these programs. Clients receiving assistance with their legal needs also have access to other services which address other needs, thereby providing a holistic approach and increasing the likelihood of long-term improvement in their life circumstances.

Many Trinity Legal clients are taking advantage of these services to improve their situation. At City Rescue Mission, Trinity Legal often assists clients who are enrolled in the Bridge to Life program. In addition to attending recovery programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous, participants in this structured program commit to attend numerous life-skill classes designed to help individuals overcome homelessness permanently. Clients take courses on anger management, financial skills, job training, parenting, relationship skills and communication, among others. Trinity Legal’s volunteer attorneys help these participants deal with legal issues that would otherwise impede their progress toward completion of the program and their goal of independent living.

Most attorneys volunteering with Trinity Legal sign up to serve at a two-hour clinic session once every month or every other month. At the clinic, two attorneys meet with a client to discuss the client’s legal issues. The attorneys answer legal questions and provide counsel on how to proceed in a given situation. If a client has a matter requiring ongoing representation, one of the interviewing attorneys might volunteer to provide further assistance on a pro bono basis or might find another attorney to assist the person. Realizing that no legal service organization is capable of meeting all the needs of the poor, Trinity Legal continues to network with other legal service organizations, government agencies and charities to address as many needs as possible.

Trinity Legal provides volunteer attorneys with training and information on common poverty law issues such as child custody, guardianship, divorce, misdemeanors, birth certificate corrections, social security and victim protective orders. A desk reference manual is available at each clinic location and covers the applicable law and procedures for many poverty law issues. Reference attorneys are also available to answer questions from clinic volunteers regarding specific legal issues.

The needs of the poor are great, far greater than the available resources of Trinity Legal and all the other worthy legal service organizations. Please consider how and where you can best serve the poor, so many of whom desperately need the help only an attorney can provide. Every attorney with a heart for service can make a difference.

Ms. Gaither is executive director of Trinity Legal Clinic of Oklahoma Inc., P.O. Box 7868, Edmond, OK 73083-7868, (405) 410-4544, www.trinitylegal.org. Trinity Legal is a Christian organization that provides free legal services without regard to a client’s sex, race, age, national origin or religion. In 1989, I was a loan officer for a bank in northwest Oklahoma City. I had been in that position for two years or so. One of the first loans I made went bad due to a divorcing couple. The collateral on the loan was a van which was worth about what the balance was on the loan. To spend money to hire a repossession company would have probably caused a deficiency balance and thus a probable loss to my portfolio.

The wife had told me that her husband had possession of the van but that she had a set of keys. She also knew where he was living at the time. Having done my own repossessions before, I decided to get this van back at no additional cost.

I enlisted the services of my friend Ray to ride with me to the debtor’s residence at approximately 9 p.m. I was wearing a dark blue T-shirt, jeans and a ball cap. Sure enough, the van was backed into the driveway at the husband’s residence and we could see the debtor through the plate glass window watching TV. Talk about adrenaline!

I told my buddy to let me out of my truck a block or so away from the van and instructed him to follow me once I passed him. I snuck down the street, opened the door, jammed the key in the ignition and sped out of the driveway. I turned back to look at the house and saw the debtor running out the door yelling.

I drove by Ray and we sped through the streets of Edmond to the foreclosed home the bank owned. It had a large metal barn where we kept our repossessed autos until sale time. The barn was located about a mile off the street on a winding gravel driveway. I placed the van in the barn and climbed back in my truck.

When Ray and I got half way off of the property, we were met by six Edmond police cars back to back. The policemen were standing by their vehicles, doors open and guns drawn. I pulled to within a few feet of the lead squad car and reached over into the seat to retrieve the debtor’s loan file. As I turned off the truck and opened my door I heard the police screaming, “Hands up and get down on the ground.” Of course I knew I wasn’t a car thief so I approached the officers at the lead squad car. Their yelling escalated and I tried to tell the police the story and the yelling escalated even more. I reached over to place the loan file on the hood of my pickup before I was escorted to the ground by several officers. One officer held a nice, brushed stainless steel revolver to my head as several others frisked me. They then escorted Ray out of the truck and did the same to him.

Let’s just say by this time I was shaking like a Chihuahua on a cold winter day! As I stood up, one of the cops said “Now you can talk.” With trembling hands I retrieved my wallet to pull out my driver’s license and a business card. And, with a shaky voice I began telling the repossessing story. When I finished the story the police officer told me I should have called the police department prior to repossessing the vehicle. I explained that my training had taught me to call immediately after the repossession. The officer then exclaimed that, “in Edmond you call before and after.” In a very calm voice he told me the main mistake I had made: “You moved once when you picked up that file and a second time when you put it on the hood. If you had moved again, I would have shot you.”

If you had moved again, I would have shot you.
