2341 STATEMENT OF OWNERSHIP
The theme of this month’s issue made me start waxing nostalgic about my first job. But I found myself unable to decide what was my first job?

I thought my first job was when I was in grade school and I had to bottle feed the baby calves on the dairy farm. All I really did was measure out the milk replacer and add warm water which now does not seem like much of a job. Dad filled the bottles and carried them to the calves, then I petted the calves while they ate. I thought it was a job but as with most of my farm chores, I was probably more trouble than I was help, especially in those early years. But I learned a great lesson in responsibility. When you have living things relying on you, you have to be dependable.

Then I thought, no, my first job was the summer after I graduated high school and I waited tables at the local country club. I do not remember much about that job except taking my tip money in quarters so I could put them in the hidden slot machines in the back room. That job taught me that you work too hard for your money to gamble it away.

Maybe my first job was in the language lab at Oklahoma State University, where I was in charge of playing language tapes for foreign students. For a small-town farm girl, that was my first experience with people of different cultures, and that job taught me how big this world really is.

Or maybe my first job was at the small town newspaper where I began my journalism career after graduating from college. I started in the “Society Department,” and despite the embarrassment of leaving the “r” out of “shirts” when describing the lime green shade of the groomsmen’s attire, I moved on to the “News Department” and covered murders, fatality accidents and prison riots. I learned that being accurate is important (as is proof-reading!).

Then it was on to my legal career and my first full-time law-related job was as a prosecutor. There I learned about the rules of law and how our society needs rules to govern our behavior. But I also learned that sometimes bad things happen to good people. Sometimes they deserve a second or even third chance.

I have had the job as small town, small firm lawyer now for many years. The lessons it has taught me are many. As lawyers, we are advocates and adversaries. We work in conflict and turmoil. Our clients are imperfect people ensnared in problematic situations. In this profession, we meet people from all walks and stations of life. Some will become friends as we forge a bond while getting through the legal trials and tribulations life has thrown their way. Others will blame their lawyer for the legal problems they find themselves in, even though those problems were often created before they ever met the lawyer. It is a daily lesson in human nature.

My latest job as your bar president has taught me more lessons — that we as lawyers take seriously our oath to serve, protect and defend the Constitution and to guarantee equal justice for all. I have learned that lawyers, no matter how busy, will give unselfishly of their time and money to help others, be it children, veterans, the elderly or any other group which needs the special skills we lawyers possess.

Life lessons learned through on-the-job training — the best kind.

On March 25, 2011, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission issued final regulations implementing and interpreting the ADA Amendments Act (ADAAA) signed into law on Sept. 25, 2008. The ADAAA, which became effective Jan. 1, 2009, amends the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA) by expressly rejecting a narrow definition of “disability” and restoring broad protections to disabled individuals in the employment context. The new regulations took effect May 24, 2011, and like the ADA itself, apply to employers with 15 or more employees. Consistent with the ADAAA, the regulations broaden the definition of disability. The changes will make it easier for individuals seeking protection under the ADA to establish a disability within the meaning of the ADA.

Federal courts, following U.S. Supreme Court precedent, adopted a narrow interpretation of “disability” under the original ADA. The result was that many plaintiffs could not make the threshold showing that they were disabled within the meaning of the ADA. Consequently, the issue of whether the employer discriminated on the basis of disability was never reached in many cases. The ADAAA legislatively overturned several Supreme Court decisions that Congress believed had interpreted the definition of “disability” too narrowly. Although the statutory definition of “disability” did not change, Congress mandated in the ADAAA that the term “disability” be broadly construed “to the maximum extent permitted” by the statute.

THE EEOC REGULATIONS BROADEN THE DEFINITION OF DISABILITY

The ADA was enacted to prohibit employment discrimination against a qualified individual on the basis of disability. The ADA defines “disability” as a physical or mental impairment that “substantially limits” an individual’s ability to perform a “major life activity.” The ADA also prohibits discrimination against individuals who have a “record of” or are “regarded as” having such an impairment. Discrimination under the ADA includes an employer’s failure to provide reasonable workplace accommodations to qualified individuals with known disabilities, unless doing so would impose an undue hardship.
The EEOC final regulations echo congressional intent, expressly stating that the “primary purpose of the ADAAA is to make it easier for people with disabilities to obtain protection under the ADA.” The regulations make clear that courts should focus their attention in ADA cases on “whether covered entities have complied with their obligations and whether discrimination has occurred, not whether the individual meets the definition of disability.” The final regulations lower the standard for proving a disability by:

- expanding the definition of “major life activity”
- relaxing the definition of “substantially limits”
- eliminating from consideration the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures
- including coverage to impairments that are episodic or in remission
- revising the definition of “regarded as” disabled

EXPANDED DEFINITION OF MAJOR LIFE ACTIVITY

While the original ADA was silent, the ADAAA defines “major life activity” to include caring for oneself, performing manual tasks, seeing, hearing, eating, sleeping, walking, standing, breathing, learning, reading, concentrating, thinking, communicating and working. The ADAAA also defines “major life activity” to include the operation of major bodily functions, such as the “immune system, normal cell growth, digestive, bowel, bladder, neurological, brain, respiratory, circulatory, endocrine and reproductive functions.” The new regulations add to the list of major life activities: sitting, reaching, bending, lifting and interacting with others. The regulations also add special sense organs and skin, genitourinary, cardiovascular, hemic, lymphatic and musculoskeletal to the list of “major bodily functions.” Rejecting the Supreme Court’s holding in Toyota Motor Manufacturing v. Williams, the regulations further clarify that the term “major life activity” is not to be interpreted strictly to create a demanding standard and is not determined by reference to whether the activity is of “central importance to daily life.”

The regulations significantly expand the number of individuals who potentially qualify as “disabled” under the ADA. This is particularly true with respect to impairments affecting “bodily functions.” In the past, an individual had to show that an impairment substantially limited a major life activity such as walking, seeing, hearing, etc. Now, an individual may be disabled if he or she has a disability that substantially limits a “major bodily function,” regardless of whether the impairment has an obvious effect on the performance of day-to-day activities. Given that the list of major life activities and major bodily functions is meant to be non-exhaustive, many more activities may be covered in the future.

RELAXED DEFINITION OF ‘SUBSTANTIALLY LIMITS’

Like the ADAAA, the EEOC final regulations provide that the term “substantially limits” should be construed broadly and is not meant to be a demanding standard. The regulations provide rules of construction for determining whether an impairment is substantially limiting. Under the new regulations, an impairment is a disability if it substantially limits the ability of an individual to perform a major life activity as compared to most people in the general population. However, the impairment need not prevent or significantly or severely restrict the individual’s ability to perform a major life activity in order to be considered a disability. Although the determination of whether an impairment is substantially limiting requires an individualized assessment, the term “substantially limited” is to be interpreted and applied to require a degree of functional limitation that is lower than the standard applied prior to the ADAAA. Further, the regulations provide that the comparison of an individual’s performance of a major life activity to the same major life activity by most people in the general population usually will not require scientific, medical or statistical analysis.

The condition, manner or duration under which a major life activity can be performed are factors that may be considered in determining whether an individual is substantially limited. This assessment may include consideration of the difficulty, effort or time required to perform a major life activity; pain experienced when performing a major life activity; the length of time a major life activity can be performed; and/or the way an impairment affects the operation of a major bodily function. According to the new regulations, the focus should be on the extent to which a major life activity is substantially limited — not on what outcomes the individual can achieve. For example, someone with a learning disability may achieve a high level of academic success, but may be substantially limited in the major life activity of learning because of the additional time or effort required to learn as compared to most people in the general population. Further, it may not be necessary to use these concepts with respect to those conditions which the regulations recognize will almost always substantially limit a major life activity, including: deafness, blindness, an intellectual disability, partially or completely missing limbs, mobility impairments requiring the use of a wheelchair, autism, cancer, cerebral palsy, diabetes, HIV, multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy, major depressive disorder, bipolar disorder, post-traumatic stress disorder, obsessive compulsive disorder and schizophrenia.

While employers retain the right to argue on a case-by-case basis that an impairment is not substantially limiting, as a practical matter employers should expect that the impairments listed above will nearly always qualify as a disability. The relaxed standards will make it increasingly risky for employers to attempt to determine on their own whether or not an individual is disabled and to deny an accommodation on that basis.

Elimination of Ameliorative Effects of Mitigating Measures

Rejecting the Supreme Court’s decision in Sutton v. United Airlines, the regulations make clear that the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures are not taken into account in determining whether someone is disabled. Under the ADAAA, the determination of whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity is to “be made without regard to the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures,” such as, medication, medical supplies, equipment, prosthetics, hearing aids, mobility devices, assistive technology or auxiliary aids. The EEOC regulations add psychotherapy, behavior therapy and physical therapy to this non-exhaustive list of mitigating measures. The only exception to this rule remains that ordinary eyeglasses or contact lenses can be considered mitigating measures.

While the ameliorative effects of mitigating measures are not considered, the negative effects of mitigating measures may be taken into account in determining whether an impairment is substantially limiting. That means that an employee whose condition does not substantially limit a major life activity may nevertheless be disabled if the employee is taking a medication, the effects of which substantially limit a major life activity.

Inclusion of Episodic Conditions and Conditions in Remission

The new regulations provide that disabilities include episodic conditions or conditions in remission, provided the impairment would substantially limit a major life activity in an active state. The appendix to the regulations provides a non-exhaustive list of conditions which generally will constitute a disability despite their episodic nature or the fact the condition is in remission, including cancer, epilepsy, multiple sclerosis, hypertension, diabetes, asthma, major depressive disorder, bipolar disorder, schizophrenia and post-traumatic stress disorder. This means that an employee whose cancer is in remission may still be considered disabled under the ADAAA, if, at the time the cancer was active, it substantially limited a major life activity. An individual can potentially be rendered permanently disabled under the ADAAA without regard to the current effects of the impairment.

Further, the new regulations provide that a temporary impairment, lasting or expected to last fewer than six months, can also be a disability under the ADA as long as the impairment substantially limits a major life activity. Although the interpretive guidance states that the duration of an impairment may be considered in determining whether it is substantially limiting, it will be increasingly difficult for employers to defend an ADA claim on the basis that the impairment was temporary or transitory.

Revised Definition of ‘Regarded As’

The ADAAA makes it easier for an individual to meet the definition of a person “regarded as” having a disability. Specifically, the ADAAA departs significantly from the old rule that an employee, under the “regarded as” prong, had to show that the employer wrongfully perceived the individual as being substantially limited in a major life activity. Consistent with the ADAAA, the new regulations expressly provide that whether an individual’s impairment “substantially limits” a major life activity is not relevant to coverage under the “regarded as” prong. Rather, an employer regards an individual as having a disability if it makes an adverse employment decision because of the employer’s belief that the individual has an impairment. An individual no longer has to demonstrate that the employer wrongfully perceived the individual as being substantially limited in a major life activity.

Unlike claims brought under the “actual” or “record of” prongs, employers may defend against a “regarded as” claim by showing that the actual or perceived impairment is transitory (lasting or expected to last six months or less) and minor. However, this defense is limited by an objective analysis of the impairment. An employer cannot claim that it subjectively believed the impairment to be transitory and minor, but rather must demonstrate that the impairment was actually transitory and minor, or that it could objectively be considered transitory and minor.

The regulations clarify that an employer is not required to provide a reasonable accommodation to an individual who meets the definition of disability under the “regarded as” prong. Further, an employee who is not asserting an accommodation claim can proceed under the less demanding standard of a “regarded as” claim — even if the employee has an actual disability. The result will likely be an increase in “regarded as” claims.

THE PRACTICAL EFFECTS OF THE EEOC REGULATIONS

Due to the broadened definition of disability, there will likely be an increase in cases filed under the ADA. The focus in such cases will no longer be on whether an individual has a covered disability. Rather, litigation will be focused on the lack of discrimination. Practitioners should ensure their employer clients are aware of their obligations under the ADA, including the obligation to engage in the interactive process and to make reasonable accommodations where warranted. In the past, many employers did not have their accommodation practices challenged since claims were dismissed for failure to establish a covered disability. In the future, an employer’s accommodation process will be scrutinized, and cases will be won or lost based on whether the employer met its obligation to accommodate.

3. The ADAAA prohibits discrimination against an individual “on the basis of disability” rather than against a “qualified individual with a disability” on the basis of disability. Consistent with the ADAAA, the new regulations refer to an “individual with a disability” and “qualified individual” as separate terms. The regulations are intended to make the primary focus of an ADA inquiry on whether the discrimination occurred — not whether an individual meets the definition of disability.

*The Real Risk of Disability in the United States, Milliman Inc., on behalf of the LIFE Foundation, May 2007
Your business client calls you with an urgent question expressed in a pleading, plaintive voice:

“Can we terminate this employee? He’s been off on workers’ compensation and we’re afraid that he’s going to get hurt again and file another claim.”

Or an individual calls you:

“I just got cleared to return to work from workers’ compensation leave but my supervisor eliminated my position while I was gone because of lack of business. Can I sue and win?”

Your response should be framed by your answer to the following question: When does the termination of an employee violate 85 O.S. §341 (§341 replaced the repealed 85 O.S. §§5-6), which prohibits discharge because an employee has filed or instituted a workers’ compensation claim? The answer to these questions appears at the end of the article (Don’t jump ahead!).

OKLAHOMA’S WORKERS’ COMPENSATION RETALIATION STATUTE

Oklahoma workers’ compensation law states that no employer “may discharge...an employee because the employee has in good faith:

1) Filed a claim;
2) Retained a lawyer for representation regarding a claim;
3) Instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding under the provisions of this act;
4) Testified or is about to testify in any proceeding under the provisions of this act; or
5) Elected to participate or not to participate in a certified workplace medical plan as provided in this act.”

85 O.S. §341 also states that an employee may not be discharged during a period of temporary total disability solely on the basis of absence from work. The only statutory exception to these rules is that an employer is not “required to rehire or retain any employee who is determined to be physically unable to perform assigned duties.”

BASIC DEFINITIONS

John Dewey said, “A problem well defined is half solved,” so it’s important to begin with relevant definitions:
Discharge: The common meaning of “discharge” in this context is “to force someone to leave an office or position,” i.e., an employee’s involuntary termination of employment.

Constructive Discharge: The Oklahoma Supreme Court also recognizes a “constructive discharge” theory in a worker’s compensation retaliation case. A “constructive discharge occurs when an employer deliberately makes or allows the employee’s working conditions to become so intolerable that the employee has no choice but to quit...The test is whether a reasonable person would view the working conditions as intolerable and would feel compelled to resign.” Constructive discharge has been alleged when a reduction in hours forces an employee to look for other work; an employee quits; and when an employee is left with no work to do. Thus “discharge” may mean the traditional termination, or it may in some circumstances, include a voluntary quit by an employee.

Filed a Claim: Sending or delivering to the Workers’ Compensation Court a Form 3, Employee’s First Notice of Accidental Injury and Claim for Compensation.

Instituted a Proceeding: “Instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding” is held to mean more than the mere filing of a claim. According to Buckner v. Gen. Motors Corp.: Merely seeking and receiving first aid is not in and of itself sufficient to institute proceedings. Some other evidence sufficient to persuade the trier of fact that the worker intended or reasonably could have intended to institute proceedings is necessary...First aid coupled with circumstances which raise a clear inference of an anticipated claim must be present before the institution of proceedings is triggered. For now, we simply conclude that the provison of medical treatment by the employer, when accompanied by circumstances...which would lead a reasonable employer to infer that a workers’ compensation claim would in all probability ensue, constitutes the institution of proceedings.

Thus, the actual filing of a case in Workers’ Compensation Court is not necessary to have “instituted” a claim, and the threshold of knowledge imputed to the employer on which a workers’ compensation retaliation claim can be based is quite low. For example, in Zaragosa v. Oneok Inc., the employee, on the day before the effective date of her discharge, gave her employer a written report from a physician “indicating that she had injured her back on the job and that she should be placed on sick leave for 7 days.” The court held that this written notice qualified as “instituting proceedings under the act.” In contrast, in Bryant v. Am. Airlines Inc., the court affirmed that plaintiff’s FMLA claim on the basis of a back condition did not put the employer on notice of the possibility of a workers’ compensation claim.

THE PRIMA FACIE CASE, ORDER OF PROOF

The prima facie case for retaliatory discharge has been long established in Oklahoma. The discharged employee must show the court:

1) Employment
2) On the job injury
3) Receipt of treatment under circumstances which put the employer on notice that treatment had been rendered for a work-related injury, or that the employee in good faith instituted, or caused to be instituted, proceedings under the act; and
4) Consequent termination of employment.

After a prima facie case is established, the burden then appropriately shifts to the employer to rebut the inference that its motive was not retaliatory by articulating that the discharge was for a legitimate non-retaliatory reason...The employer need not persuade the court that it was actually motivated by the proffered reasons. The employer’s burden is a burden of production of relevant and credible evidence, not a burden of persuasion.

The employer is obligated to set forth a legally sufficient reason for the employee’s termination. If it does so, the presumption raised by the prima facie case is rebutted. The employee is then given a full and fair opportunity to demonstrate that the reason offered by the employer for terminating the employee was not the true reason for the employment decision, but was, rather, pretext. The employee bears the ultimate burden of persuading the trier of fact that the employer retaliatorily discharged the employee.

KEY ONE: ‘CONSEQUENT’ TERMINATION = SIGNIFICANTLY MOTIVATED

Most retaliatory discharge cases center on the fourth prong of the prima facie case, whether a consequent termination has occurred. A showing of “consequent termination” requires the production of evidence that gives rise to “a legal inference the discharge was significantly motivated by retaliation for exercising one’s statutory rights.” A plaintiff need not meet a “but for” standard for a successful §5 claim; however, she must “present evidence that does more than show the exercise of her statutory rights was only one of many possible factors resulting in her discharge.” It is important to remember that “consequent” is not the same as “subsequent,” although as a practical matter jurors often have a hard time separating the two.

Timing of the Discharge

The inquiry into the “significantly motivated” inference begins with a check of the temporal proximity, or the timing of the termination in relation to the workers’ compensation claim. How long after a claim was filed or initiated did the termination occur? When does the timing become significant? In Thompson v. Medley Material Handling Inc., the employee was injured on Aug. 23, was off for a month with pay, returned to work, filed a workers’ compensation claim on Nov. 5, and was laid off about six weeks later. The court refused to necessarily connect his termination to the filing of the workers’ compensation claim, absent other evidence. The court stated:

> The reasons for Thompson’s discharge... could only be deduced by pure speculation. Such evidence could not support the presentation of the matter to a jury. To hold otherwise would be to require any employer laying off a worker who has at any time in the past filed a workers’ compensation action to submit to a jury trial based purely on the coincidence of the layoff and the past filing.

The Thompson opinion is widely cited for the proposition that while the timing of the discharge may be evidence of a retaliatory discharge, timing alone is not sufficient to meet the prima facie case. In Taylor v. Cache Creek Nursing Centers, subsequent to Thompson, even when a plaintiff was fired immediately after returning from a two-week, doctor-ordered disability leave, the court stated that, “[I]t is not sufficient to raise a legal inference that the firing was significantly motivated by retaliation,” and held for the defendant. The timing of the discharge may constitute evidence of a retaliatory motive, but it is not outcome determinative.

Employer’s Response

The issue discussed most often in relation to the “significantly motivated” test is the employer’s response to an employee’s notification of an injury on the job or initiation of proceedings. Oklahoma jurisprudence holds that the employer’s response to its employees’ contemplated or actual commencement of a workers’ compensation proceeding may constitute evidence of retaliatory motive. The table below is a sampling of cases in which factual circumstances of the employer’s response were directly tied to the “significantly motivated” factor, and the court’s holding in each case.

The pattern emerges: To avoid exposure in a retaliation claim, an employer’s response should be one that handles a report or initiation of a claim in a straightforward, consistent, objective manner, with respect for the employee’s right to seek treatment and representation.

The Big Picture of the Employer’s Response: Pattern or Practice

In Pettitt v. Dolese Brothers Co., the court allowed testimony regarding other employees’ injuries and workers’ compensation claims, even though the injury occurred several years prior, and allowed the testimony of a former supervisor who also alleged termination after filing a workers’ compensation claim. Over the objections of the defendant, the court determined the evidence was relevant to the question of “pattern or pressure” against other employees who filed a claim and thus to the question of “significant motivation” for the termination of the plaintiff. A similar situation existed in Wallace v. Halliburton, where there was testimony that led the court to allow the imposition of punitive damages because the evidence would “support a pattern of retaliatory discharges” on behalf of Halliburton. Based on these two cases, an employer should heed to not only correctly handle the individual employee that initiates a claim, but also periodically analyze claims handling over a period of years. Conversely, an employee may recognize that he is not the first employee to be terminated after filing a claim, and bring this to the attorney’s attention to support his case.

KEY TWO: THE EMPLOYER’S BURDEN OF PRODUCTION

As stated by Buckner, supra, the employer’s burden is one of production of evidence that raises a genuine issue of fact of whether the employee was discharged in retaliation. The employee’s burden is then to address the specific reason given by the employer to show that the reason is pretextual. Oklahoma case law shows that employer’s reason must also be consistent and lawfully based.

Employers’ Business Reasons

Inconsistency: In a recent case, Estrada v. Port City Properties Inc., the Court of Civil Appeals reviewed evidence that the defendant offered differing reasons for the plaintiff’s termination. The court stated that because of the differing explanation of the facts surrounding termination, more than one conclusion could be reached regarding the reason for termination, and remanded the case for trial. At trial, the evidence “indicated that the [employer] gave inconsistent versions as to how the events [of termination] unfolded.” The jury returned a verdict in favor of the employee and awarded him more than $75,000.

Insurance costs: In Thornburg v. Frac Tech Sers., the plaintiff was told he was being terminated “due to insurance costs.” In the same conversation, the employer discussed the employee’s return to work at light duty. The court held that the terminology used by the supervisor could show a desire to terminate the employee due to workers’ compensation insurance costs, and summary judgment for the employer was precluded. Some employers are even more straightforward: In Elzey, supra, the plaintiff testified he was told he was being terminated for filing a workers’ compensation claim.

Business Necessity: In Thompson v. Medley Material Handling Inc., supra, the plaintiff presented his prima facie case, and the employer submitted evidence that showed the plaintiff’s termination “had been part of a company-wide reduction in staff necessitated by a slowdown in the oil industry.” The plaintiff presented no evidence of pretext, other than the timing of the layoff, which was only six weeks after the plaintiff filed a claim. The court held this proximity alone was insufficient to show the business reason for termination was pretextual.

Employee Performance

Another reason given to refute the “significantly motivated” standard is evidence of a plaintiff-employee’s poor performance. In Delgado v. Tom Kelly & Assocs., the defendant encouraged the employee to go to medical appointments, worked with the employee to determine the best time for surgery, but eventually terminated the employee due to concerns about the employee’s production levels. The court granted Summary Judgment to the defendant because it presented evidence that there was no pressure exerted on the plaintiff not to file a claim, and the supervisor’s demands regarding production, while harsh, did not show retaliatory motive.

Violation of Employer Policy and Misconduct

In Redricks v. Industrial Vehicles Int’l. Inc., the employer submitted what appeared to be a legitimate, non-retaliatory reason for the termination of the employee who was out on TTD leave: He had violated a policy that required all personnel to call in before 9 a.m. every day if they were gone for any reason, and the plaintiff had failed to do so. However, the employee testified that he had never received a copy of the call-in policy, and in fact, it was created while the plaintiff was off work. The court determined the employer’s justification for the policy (to schedule personnel and to determine whether an employee was in the community and intended to continue employment) was insufficient justification for the “unduly burdensome” requirement to call in.

In contrast, and cited in Redricks, is the situation in Hopkins v. Seagate, in which the plaintiff failed to comply with company policy requiring her to provide documentation and information during her absence from work, and her lack of cooperation with defendant’s efforts to accomplish a medical examination prior to her return to work. The court determined that these policy violations were sufficient reasons for termination other “than to retaliate against her for filing a workers’ compensation claim,” and upheld the jury’s non-retaliatory verdict.

A statutory policy was at issue in the termination of a state employee in Glasco v. Okla. Department of Corrections, after he had been off work for more than a year due to a workers’ compensation injury. The defendant’s reason for termination was that state law “clearly authorizes a state employer to discharge an employee who has been on leave without pay for a year or more notwithstanding the workers’ compensation laws.” The court recognized an inconsistency between 85 O.S. §5 and the statute authorizing termination after one year, and held that “If there is a conflict between two statutes on the same subject and the language in one statute is general while the language in the other is specific, the specific statute will control over the general statute.” Thus, the more specific state leave policy was upheld.

Finally, in Kennedy v. Builders Warehouse Inc., the employer gave as its sole, valid, non-retaliatory reason for the employee’s termination that the employee had confronted and had an altercation with a co-employee. The employee produced evidence of the first three prongs of the retaliation prima facie case, and demonstrated that he was terminated after he was released to return to work without restriction, after he told the employer he needed more medical treatment, and after he told his employer he was going to hire a lawyer. The plaintiff also denied the altercation, which allegedly occurred five days before his termination. The court held this information was circumstantial evidence “suggesting employer’s pretext,” and the case was remanded for trial.

After Acquired Evidence

Oklahoma courts do not, however, allow an employer relief from liability for terminating an employee engaged in misconduct which is discovered after the employee is terminated. In Mosley v. Truckstops Corp. of America, the employer discovered after termination that the employee had falsified his application and health insurance application while employed. The employer argued that evidence of employee misconduct should be considered by the jury in determining damages and the jury should have been instructed as such. The court hypothesized that allowing after-acquired evidence was inconsistent with Oklahoma law because such evidence would relieve the employer of liability, even if the evidence was not a significant factor in the employer’s decision to terminate. The court determined that giving such an instruction was reversible error.

KEY THREE: AN EXCEPTION TO ‘SIGNIFICANTLY MOTIVATED’ - THE PHYSICAL INABILITY TO PERFORM THE JOB

The statutory exception to terminating an employee because he has filed a workers’ compensation is set out in 85 O.S. §341(C):

After an employee’s period of temporary total disability has ended, no employer shall be required to rehire or retain any employee who is determined to be physically unable to perform the assigned duties. The failure of an employer to rehire or retain any such employee shall not be deemed a violation of this section.

For example, in Elzey v. Forrest, the court indicated that a “legitimate” reason for terminating an employee is the employee’s inability to perform his assigned duties. In Taylor v. Cache Creek Nursing Centers, an employee returned to work from disability leave and was given a chance to improve, but was not able to perform all the required duties, and the court affirmed the trial court’s decision that the plaintiff failed to establish a prima facie case.

Thus, the case law is consistent with the statute: If an employee cannot physically do the job he was doing when injured, the employer is not obligated to rehire or retain the employee in that position.

However, the employer must be aware of the physical inability to perform the duties of the job prior to conform to the statutory exception. In Buckner, discussed above, the employee admitted in deposition that at the time she was terminated, she was physically unable to perform her job duties. Despite this statement, the court determined that because the employer had not terminated her for “inability to perform her job duties,” but had asserted instead that the plaintiff was fired for “loitering,” the statutory exception did not relieve the employer of liability. The implication is that for an employer to claim the statutory exception, not only does the employee have to be physically incapable of performing her former job duties at the time of the termination; the employer must terminate her for the reason of the incapacity. The knowledge of physical inability might require the employer to ask about or be aware of an employee’s permanent disability when the employee is released to return to work, or require a physical abilities test before allowing the employee back to work.

EMPLOYER’S CHECKLIST

The “significantly motivated” standard coupled with the burden of production of a non-retaliatory reason for termination places the burden of compliance with 85 O.S. §341 squarely on the shoulders of the employer. An attorney representing a business should advise his client/employer to take the following steps to reduce exposure to workers’ compensation retaliation claims:

1) Train managers and supervisors on how to react if an employee claims an injury; i.e., have and execute a plan for medical treatment/evaluation of the employee; consider post-accident drug testing; file a Form 2, notify upper management; notify the employer’s insurer; be in contact with the employee.

2) Instruct managers and supervisors to interact appropriately with employees that have filed a workers’ compensation claim; i.e., work with the employee to schedule medical appointments, communicate to determine when the employee is likely to return to work; refrain from threatening or derogatory comments.

3) Communicate with the insurance company and the employee regarding light duty work, releases to return to work and permanent disability.

4) Consider setting up a procedure where employees can report retaliation of any kind.

5) Train managers and supervisors about avoiding retaliation and the risk of retaliation claims.

6) Check in with returning employees to determine whether they perceive or are experiencing retaliation.

CONCLUSION

Every employer who has an employee with a comp claim and every employee injured on the job is at risk for retaliation. Oklahoma’s workers’ compensation retaliation law is a highly litigated, fact-intensive inquiry, and the damages for non-compliance can be significant. Thus, when an attorney is faced with a question regarding the possibility of workers’ compensation retaliation, she should keep one eye on the law and the other eye on practical considerations to frame the advice given.

What would you have told the business client mentioned at the beginning of this article? Answers may vary from lawyer to lawyer but the advice to the first client is “Firing someone because you fear an additional comp claim is likely to get you sued (probably successfully) under the retaliatory discharge statute. ‘I wouldn’t do it.’” To the second client’s question “Can I sue and win?” The answer is “Maybe. If you can prove the downturn in business wasn’t the real reason for the layoff, and that in some sense you were being picked on because of your comp claim, you may have a suit.”

1. 85 O.S. §§5-6 were repealed, effective Aug. 26, 2011. The sections were effectively replaced by Section 341 of Title 85, which reads as follows:
A. No employer may discharge or, except for nonpayment of premium, terminate any group health insurance of any employee because the employee has in good faith:
   1) Filed a claim;
   2) Retained a lawyer for representation regarding a claim;
   3) Instituted or caused to be instituted any proceeding under the provisions of this act;
   4) Testified or is about to testify in any proceeding under the provisions of this act; or
   5) Elected to participate or not to participate in a certified workplace medical plan as provided in this act.

B. No employer may discharge any employee during a period of temporary total disability solely on the basis of absence from work.
C. After an employee’s period of temporary total disability has ended, no employer shall be required to rehire or retain any employee who is determined to be physically unable to perform assigned duties. The failure of an employer to rehire or retain any such employee shall not be deemed a violation of this section.
D. No employer may discharge an employee for the purpose of avoiding payment of temporary total disability benefits to the injured employee.
E. An employer which violates any provision of this section shall be liable in a district court action for reasonable damages, actual and punitive if applicable, suffered by an employee as a result of the violation. An employee discharged in violation of the Workers’ Compensation Code shall be entitled to be reinstated to his or her former position. Exemplary or punitive damage awards made pursuant to this section shall not exceed $100,000. The employee shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence.

*There were few substantive changes:
  • 85 O.S. §341 uses the word “employer” in place of “person, firm, partnership, corporation, or other entity” former used in 85 O.S. §§5-6.
  • 85 O.S. §341(A)(5) replaces the reference to Section 14 in 85 O.S. §5 (regarding certified workplace medical plans) with a reference to the “act.”
  • 85 O.S. §341(E) deletes the reference to Section 29 in 85 O.S. §6 and states that an employer who violates the provision of the section shall be liable.
  • 85 O.S. §341(E) specifies the burden of proof upon the employee to be “by a preponderance of the evidence.”

The Basics of Unemployment
By Jessica Sherrill

In dealing with employment, we always hope we hired well and that our employees will succeed. But, sometimes, it starts bright and ends bleak. With the end of any employment relationship, there is always the possibility of a claim for unemployment.

Unemployment insurance or unemployment compensation was a concept created during the Great Depression in 1936 as part of the Social Security Act. The purpose was to help the American people stay afloat in tough times. It was and still is not meant to replace what a person would earn in wages. It should help cover some of the expenses one might have, such as a mortgage payment.

In the past few years, unemployment compensation has become a hot topic for both employers and the unemployed as we have had a slump in our economy. What is frustrating for most who deal with unemployment on either side is a frequent misunderstanding of the state unemployment law. A few common misconceptions about unemployment are:

Myth #1: She quit, so she can’t get unemployment.
Myth #2: He was fired, so he can get unemployment.
Myth #3: Everybody who files for unemployment gets it.

All of these are false. Here is why:

TABLE OF CLAIMS AND BURDEN OF PROOF

- Misconduct: Employer the reason(s) for being dismissed
- Voluntary Quit: Claimant the reason(s) for quitting
- Lack of Work: Employer whether there was work to perform

Depending on each type of claim, the burden of proof is assigned to either the claimant or the employer. Basically, whichever is the moving party to cause the separation has the responsibility of proving that it was for a good reason.
MISCONDUCT

When the employer dismisses an employee “for cause,” misconduct will often apply. When a claim for unemployment reaches the employer and states that the reason for separation was “misconduct,” as chosen by the claimant when filing the claim, then the employer is responsible for explaining to the OESC why it decided to terminate the claimant’s employment. In 2010, there were 45,981 claims in Oklahoma that were categorized as misconduct. Of these, the claimant prevailed 62 percent of the time.

Depending upon the reasoning and support for the employer’s decision, the OESC will decide whether benefits are allowed and paid to the claimant or denied and not. The important concept for employers to remember is that, although we are considered an at-will state, a need for the specific reason(s) for termination of employment will arise in an unemployment claim. This often throws employers off guard, especially when written warnings and evaluations are requested to decide the claim. It should be known that frequent, written employment record keeping is most helpful to employers in these claims.

When misconduct is found, there is likely an intentional deviation from the employer’s expectations by the claimant. As an example, an employee who frequently reports to work late despite many written warnings and a clear indication that continuation of tardiness will result in termination would be likely considered misconduct. In this example, the claimant has sole responsibility for reporting to work on time each day, and despite warnings, claimant did not improve. To contrast, benefits would be allowed for an absence of misconduct when an employee “just wasn’t working out,” as the implication is that the employee’s inability to do the job was unintentional.

VOLUNTARY QUIT

In a voluntary quit claim, it was the employee who made the decision to resign and separate from the employer, therefore, it is the claimant who has the burden of proof to show there existed “good cause” or “compelling family circumstance” to quit. Last year, there were close to 17,000 claims of this nature with claimants being successful only 16 percent of the time.

In this type of claim, the main objective is to find out exactly why the claimant resigned. As mentioned above, the claimant would have a successful claim if it’s proven that there was “good cause” for quitting. For instance, a claimant who resigns because of a supervisor’s continual verbal abuse that doesn’t improve after the claimant reported concerns to the supervisor and up the ladder would likely be allowed benefits for voluntary resignation for good cause. To contrast, a claimant who quits to accept other employment would not have good cause.

On the issue of “compelling family circumstances,” a claimant would be allowed benefits if, for example, the claimant resigned for medical reasons, to escape domestic violence, or to relocate with a spouse’s employment elsewhere. Our state unemployment law is very clear to delineate these areas of exception.

The resignation letter itself becomes very important in these matters. There is always an expectation that the resignation will shed light on the reason the claimant resigned. In the absence of a clearly stated reason, the OESC would then be charged to collect statements from both sides to determine what the employer believed to be the reason as well as the claimant’s stated reason for quitting. As in all claims, written documentation is more persuasive than anything either side verbalizes.

LACK OF WORK

Lack of work claims are exactly as it sounds — there is no work to be completed. These often arise as a result of some sort of reduction in force. When there is truly no other reason for the employee to become separated other than through budgetary shortfalls, the claimant is allowed benefits. This category is the largest majority of claims the OESC handled last year. Close to 137,000 claims were for lack of work, and most likely, all will be allowed unless there are other disqualifying issues.

CONCLUSION

Claims for unemployment have seen a sharp incline in the previous years. When both the claimant and employer fully participate in the process by providing timely, accurate and detailed information with the focus being on what is needed to decide the claim, the OESC is able to fulfill its responsibility to balance the important and sometimes competing tasks of keeping our unemployed financially afloat while also ensuring that benefits aren’t paid out automatically to the detriment of our state’s employers.

2. “Economic insecurity due to unemployment is a serious menace to the health, morals, and welfare of the people of this state. Unemployment is therefore a subject of general interest and concern which requires appropriate action by the Legislature to prevent its spread and to lighten its burden which now so often falls with crushing force upon the unemployed worker and his family.” 40 O.S. §1-102.

Workers’ Compensation Hearings at the Oklahoma Department of Labor

By Walter Jenny Jr.

In Oklahoma, most employers are required to provide workers’ compensation insurance coverage for their employees. Workers’ compensation performs a dual role — ensuring compensation and medical care for employees who are injured in the course of their employment while minimizing the potential liability of employers by insulating them from civil lawsuits.

The Oklahoma Department of Labor (ODOL) levies civil penalties against non-exempt employers who do not provide workers’ compensation insurance for their employees. If the breach is willful, the employer has committed a misdemeanor and may face a fine, jail time or both. The purpose of this article is to review the legal requirements, the role and process of the Department of Labor, and expectations if you or your clients receive a citation from the agency.

THE ROLE OF THE OKLAHOMA DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Under Oklahoma law, compensation is to be paid to an employee for injuries arising out of and in the course of their employment. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.1. As a general rule, employers in Oklahoma are required to provide workers’ compensation insurance coverage for their employees. As with any rule, of course, there are exceptions, which will be addressed in a later section.

The Oklahoma Department of Labor has six Employment Standards Division employees — two in Tulsa and four in the agency’s main office in Oklahoma City — with the title of Labor Compliance Officers (LCOs) who are tasked with investigating and citing employers who fail to comply with the law.

During the past five years, ODOL has opened 6,929 cases and issued 1,313 citations for noncompliance. Almost $3 million in penalties have been assessed against noncompliant employers during that time, or an average of about $2,268 per employer. Ninety-five percent of the citations issued are first violations, indicating ODOL’s efforts have a significant impact in securing compliance with the law going forward.

WHAT IS AN EMPLOYER? WHO IS AN EMPLOYEE?

Section 3(8) and (9) of Title 85 define the terms “employer” and “employee” for the purposes of the Workers’ Compensation Act (the act). Sole proprietors and members of a partnership are generally not considered employees, but may elect to be included by endorsement under the insurance policy. The same is true for a member of a limited liability company or a “stockholder-employee” of a corporation owning 10 percent or more of the capital or stock of the business, respectively.3

The term “employee” does not include those who provide voluntary services and receive no wages other than meals, transportation, lodging or reimbursement for incidental expenses. Also excluded are voluntary participants in drug or alcohol rehab programs or participants in sheltered workshops certified by the U.S. Department of Labor.

Truck drivers merit close attention under the law. Owner-operators who own or lease a truck or semi-tractor for hire are not considered employees if a) they actually operate the vehicle, and b) the person contracting for their services is not the lessor of the vehicle. The same applies to truck drivers who transport new or used vehicles, also known as “drive-away owner-operators.” 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §3(9) and (10). However, in either case they can also elect to be covered as sole proprietors.

Whether an employer/employee relationship exists under the act depends largely on the employee’s status or role in relation to the business.

The guiding case used by ODOL in determining whether workers are employees or independent contractors is Page v. Hardy, 1958 OK 293, 334 P.2d 782. In that case, the Supreme Court recognized that

“an independent contractor is one who engages to perform certain service for another, according to his own manner and method, free from control and direction of his employer in all matters connected with the performance of the service, except as to the result or product of the work. In other words independent contractor denotes any person to whom the revising or repair of a chattel is entrusted in such a way as to give him charge and control of the details of doing the work.”

The court went on to enumerate elements to be considered in distinguishing between an independent contractor and a servant:

a) the nature of the contract between the parties, whether written or oral;

b) the degree of control which, by the agreement, the employer may exercise on the details of the work or the independence enjoyed by the contractor or agent;

c) whether or not the one employed is engaged in a distinct occupation or business and whether he carries on such occupation or business for others;

d) the kind of occupation with reference to whether, in the locality, the work is usually done under the direction of the employer or by a specialist without supervision;

e) the skill required in the particular occupation;

f) whether the employer or the workman supplies the instrumentalities, tools and the place of work for the person doing the work;

g) the length of time for which the person is employed;

h) the method of payment, whether by the time or by the job;

i) whether or not the work is a part of the regular business of the employer;

j) whether or not the parties believe they are creating the relationship of master and servant; and

k) the right of either to terminate the relationship without liability.

Id., at ¶10.

ODOL’s LCOs weigh these factors in determining whether a worker is an independent contractor or an employee who, absent exemptions, should be covered by workers’ compensation insurance. Many cases fall into gray areas, bearing characteristics of both. The LCO seeks to gather enough information for the scales to tip to one side or the other. As a result, cooperation from the well-intentioned employer is more likely to help the employer’s cause than to hurt it.

EXEMPTIONS TO COVERAGE

Most of the coverage exemptions are found in Sections 2.1 through 2.7, as well as Section 3, of the act.

Domestic servants or casual workers in a private household in which the gross annual payroll for such workers in the preceding calendar year was less than $10,000 are exempt. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.1(1). Similarly, agricultural or horticultural workers employed in a business with a gross annual payroll in the preceding year for such workers of less than $100,000 are also exempt. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.1(2).

These exemptions create bookkeeping challenges for some employers. For example, a private household that paid $9,500 in 2008 but paid $10,500 in 2009 should purchase coverage effective Jan. 1, 2010. If that payroll drops to $6,000 during 2010, the employer needs to keep coverage in place until at least Dec. 31, 2010, and is not required to insure their employees in 2011, even if the payroll exceeds $10,000 in 2011. LCOs may require an extensive review of multiple years of payroll records to document whether, and when, the employer was exempt from coverage requirements.

The agricultural/horticultural exemption also provides some challenging issues in Oklahoma. As with domestic servants, records must be maintained over the years to track the gross annual payroll. Moreover, the terms “agriculture” and “horticulture” are not defined in the act. Finally, agricultural workers who are not engaged in the operation of motorized machines are specifically exempt from the coverage requirements. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.2.

Most of the pertinent cases handed down by our courts have been appeals from workers’ compensation claims. In most of those cases, claimants were injured on farms while they were not using motorized machinery, although they might from time to time use motorized equipment during the course of their employment. See Gillespie v. Sathers Family Partnership, 2009 OK CIV APP 108, ___ P.3d ___; Virginia Lay Lawn Service v. Cain, 1994 OK CIV APP 5, 868 P.2d 1322; and Whitworth v. Melvin West/West Dairy, 1990 OK CIV APP 35, 798 P.2d 228. Presumably an employee injured while using the motorized equipment on a farm would not be exempt from coverage. In Gillespie, for example, the court specifically held “the exemption from coverage applies because Gillespie was not engaged, or assigned, as any type of motorized machine operator at the time of her injury” (emphasis added). Consequently agricultural and horticultural employers should secure workers’ compensation insurance coverage if their employees use motorized equipment, even if it appears at first blush that they would usually be exempt from coverage requirements.

Licensed real estate sales associates or brokers who are paid on a commission basis are also exempt from coverage. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.1(4). Also exempt is “any person who is providing services in a medical care or social services program, or who is a participant in a work or training program, administered by the Department of Human Services, unless the department is required by federal law or regulations to provide workers’ compensation for such person. This section shall not be construed to include nursing homes.” 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.4.

Another challenging exemption is found in Section 2.6, which was amended in 2009. Exempt from the act is any employer “with five or less total employees, all of whom are related by blood or marriage to:

1. The employer if the employer is a natural person;
2. A general or limited partner if the partnership is the employer;
3. The member of an association or limited liability company responsible for forming the association or limited liability company if the association or limited liability company is the employer; or
4. An incorporator of a corporation if the corporation is the employer.”

The spouse of any employer who is exempt from the Workers’ Compensation Act is also exempt. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.6 (B).

All of the employees must be related by blood or marriage under the act; the inclusion of just one employee who is not a relative spoils the exemption. But the statute does not define, by degrees of consanguinity, what the relationship may be. Is a first cousin sufficient? If a first cousin, why not a second cousin, or a second cousin once removed, or the spouse of a second cousin once removed? What about a first cousin’s spouse, or a first cousin’s stepchild? What if a son and his wife are working in the family business, they divorce, the son leaves with his new girlfriend, and the ex-wife remains employed? What about a daughter and her common-law husband/live-in boyfriend? Each situation invoking Section 2.6(B) must be reviewed on a case-by-case basis, and a judgment call made as to whether it satisfies the legislative intent.

Subsection 4 raised additional concerns. Quite often the person who incorporates a corporation is an attorney or CPA who has no business management connection to the business or its principals. Similarly, in Subsection 3 the person responsible for forming an association or limited liability company may not be related to any of the employees; further, if two or three unrelated individuals acted in concert to form the business, which one is “responsible” for the purposes of this subsection? Identifying “the incorporator” or “responsible member” for the purpose of compliance with this amendment may depend on interviews with corporate officers as well as paperwork filed with the secretary of state.

Finally, any youth sports league which qualifies as a 26 U.S.C. §501(c)(3) or (4) exemption from federal income taxation is exempt from the act. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §2.7. Proof of 501(c)(3) or (4) status is usually sufficient to satisfy ODOL’s requirements.

THE INVESTIGATIVE PROCESS

Cases come to ODOL through a variety of sources. If a Form 3 is filed at the Workers’ Compensation Court and no insurance carrier is identified, ODOL is notified and a case file is opened. Whistleblowers may also bring non-coverage to the attention of ODOL; they often include current or past employees or competitors. In addition, cases in ODOL’s Wage and Hour Unit often result in workers’ compensation investigations, especially if the employer contends a claimant is an independent contractor and ODOL determines otherwise. If insurance carriers receive or issue a cancellation of existing coverage, ODOL is notified. Employers who have committed a first violation will be routinely checked to determine if they have obtained and maintained coverage in subsequent months. In all cases, the opening of an investigative file does not mean ODOL has concluded a violation has occurred. Staff will proceed with due diligence to determine if coverage exists, or if the employer enjoys an exemption.

LCOs have a number of resources at their disposal. For example, ODOL has access to a nationwide database provided by the National Council on Compensation Insurance Inc. NCCI maintains the nation’s largest database of workers’ compensation insurance information and has been designated by the Oklahoma insurance commissioner as the official rating and statistical organization for Oklahoma. LCOs also check records of the Oklahoma Employment Security Commission to determine whether a respondent has reported employees, and, if so, how many and during what calendar quarters.

After a case has been opened, and it appears to an LCO that a respondent may be out of compliance, the LCO will issue a pre-citation letter to the respondent. The “pre-cite” directs the respondent to provide, within 10 days, a certificate of workers’ compensation insurance with dates of coverage. If no coverage exists, the respondent is directed to provide payroll, business and tax records upon which a determination can be made. Business records will include any contracts, insurance policies or other business records of subcontractors or independent contractors who may be mistaken for employees. If an employer ignores the pre-citation letter, the agency issues a subpoena duces tecum for the same records.

If, after a review of all the evidence available, it appears to the LCO that a respondent is in violation, a citation is issued. The citation informs the respondent of the number of employees identified, the civil penalty rate (per employee), and the resulting amount of the civil penalty. It also informs the respondent of the date, time and place of the summary hearing at which the case will be heard.

Under 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.1(A), an employer who fails to provide workers’ compensation coverage “shall be liable for a civil penalty … of not more than Two Hundred Fifty Dollars ($250.00) per employee for a first offense.” If the employer secures workers’ compensation insurance within 30 days after receiving notice of the violation, the civil penalty is not to exceed $75 per employee.

Because payroll counts change as employees come and go, ODOL interprets this statute to cover the total number of employees who were not covered by insurance. As a result, employers with a high turnover are at risk of a higher penalty than a company with a steady workforce, even if, on a daily basis, they maintain the same size crew. Part of the rationale behind this interpretation has been the fact that each of those employees has been exposed to a possible injury on the job without being covered by insurance. The statute provides no other guidance as to when a head-count should be taken for determining the civil penalty.

In many cases, unfortunately, an LCO may be left largely in the dark to make a decision. A respondent who refuses to communicate with an LCO during the investigative process runs the risk of alienating the hearing officer who is charged with making “a fair and equitable resolution of the violation.” 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.2(A). There may be a simple misunderstanding of facts between the LCO and the employer that, if clarified at an early stage, could lead to a prompt and satisfying settlement that would avoid both an unnerving appearance at a hearing and commensurate legal fees.

APPEARING BEFORE THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

In addition to the provisions of the Administrative Procedures Act, ODOL utilizes a novel “summary hearing” codified at 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.2. The summary hearing provides an opportunity to review the evidence and testimony of each side in a more informal setting than a formal individual proceeding under the APA. Over 95 percent of the cases heard annually are summary hearings.

Any attorney appearing at either a summary or formal hearing should first enter an appearance. There are no formal requirements; a letter or email will suffice as well as a more formal pleading. Once an entry of appearance has been filed, ODOL staff will communicate directly with legal counsel instead of the respondent. Conversely, ODOL staff will rarely work with an attorney on a case until some sort of entry of appearance has been received.

ODOL’s LCOs are charged with conducting investigations and issuing citations, which consistently are a function of the number of employees times the statutory civil penalty rate. Hearing officers, on the other hand, are charged with taking into consideration mitigating circumstances, determining “a fair and equitable resolution of the violation,” and, if warranted, assessing the civil penalty “commensurate with the violation so adjudged.” 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.2(A). Summary and formal hearings are conducted before private attorneys who contract with ODOL to serve as impartial administrative law judges.7

ODOL’s workers’ comp dockets are held twice a month, with a docket in Tulsa once every two months. All dockets are digitally recorded. A summary hearing begins with a call of the docket to determine which respondents are present. Each case begins with the presentation of a summary by ODOL’s legal counsel of the facts on which the LCO made the determination. The respondent is then given an opportunity to explain their version of the story. This provides the hearing officer with a clear view of what issues exist — does the respondent believe his workers are independent contractors, or did they believe they were exempt from coverage requirements, or were they under the mistaken belief that they had coverage? Sometimes there is a legitimate dispute about how many workers should be counted, especially if an employer has a mix of genuine employees and independent contractors.

Any individuals, including the LCO, are placed under oath, and may be examined by legal counsel, the unrepresented respondent or the hearing officer.

Documents may be presented to support their respective positions. Authentication of documents may be challenged, but hearsay is freely considered at this stage. The objective is to give the hearing officer a clear understanding of the information available to the LCO in making the decision.8 A respondent may testify that his insurance agent told him he didn’t need workers’ comp insurance without calling the agent as a witness or presenting documentary corroboration; if the case proceeds to a formal hearing, however, it may be necessary to call the insurance agent as a live witness to confirm or discredit such testimony.

The hearing officer “may remit, mitigate or negotiate” the LCO’s assessment. In doing so, the hearing officer may take into consideration “the appropriateness of such penalty in light of the life of the business of the employer charged, the gravity of the violation, and the extent to which the employer ... has complied with the provisions of section 61 of (Title 85) or has otherwise attempted to remedy the consequences of the said violation.” 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.1(B).

In almost every case, the hearing officer will render a decision at the conclusion of a summary hearing, and the respondent receives a copy. The order includes findings of fact and conclusions of law, and informs the respondent of appeal rights under the law. On rare occasions, the hearing officer may take a case under advisement and issue an order days or weeks after the hearing.

Employers are also afforded an opportunity to “provide additional mitigating circumstances or evidence to the hearing officer” within 10 days of the assessment.

A respondent may appeal the decision of the hearing officer by filing, within 30 days of the date of assessment, a written request for a formal hearing. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.2(B). Formal hearings, held on the same docket as summary hearings, are conducted with the higher evidentiary requirements and formalities of the APA. Formal hearings are heard de novo, although the administrative law judge may take into consideration the order rendered at the summary hearing. Respondents may appeal from a formal hearing order within 30 days thereof under the auspices of the APA.

Unpaid final orders may be collected in district court as foreign judgments. ODOL also routinely files claims with the Oklahoma Tax Commission for income tax warrant intercepts, and pursues other collection remedies where appropriate.

To avoid hearings altogether, a respondent may enter into a “consent agreement” with the LCO to pay the assessment, either in lump sum or on a short payment schedule. A consent agreement constitutes an admission of a first violation and waives the respondent’s right to seek mitigation of the citation.

SECOND AND SUBSEQUENT VIOLATIONS

On occasion, respondents have more than one lapse of coverage. The penalty for second or subsequent offenses rises to $1,000 per employee, with a cap of $10,000 “for all related series of violations.” 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.1(A). The statute does not elaborate on what constitutes a “related series of violations,” but as a general rule it seems reasonable to the department that a lapse of coverage on more than one occasion for the same reason would satisfy the definition. A bona fide dispute about whether a respondent was exempt from coverage requirements in the first instance, and a missed premium payment in a second instance, might constitute an “unrelated series of violations” that could waive the statutory cap. Whether two or more violations are related rests in the sound discretion of the administrative law judge.

CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS

The most onerous penalty available to ODOL is the cease and desist order. If, after two offenses, an employer fails to obtain coverage within 30 days of the second offense, the commissioner of labor is required by law to order “the cessation of activities of an employer whose employees are not covered by workers’ compensation insurance.” 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.1(B). If an employer has made application for insurance coverage and, through no fault of the employer, the application is still pending, the employer may continue doing business until a decision has been made on the application.

The commissioner’s order is enforceable in district court, which may issue an injunction without bond. Any subsequent violations of the district court order constitute contempt of court.

As a practical matter, a respondent against whom a cease and desist order has been imposed should shut down all operations immediately until insurance is secured, except as may be necessary to secure coverage. Once it is secured, a current certificate of coverage from their insurance carrier should be submitted to the commissioner. After ODOL verifies that insurance is in place, the cease and desist order will be lifted by the commissioner of labor.

CRIMINAL SANCTIONS

Any employer who willfully fails to provide required workers’ compensation insurance coverage commits a misdemeanor and may be fined up to $1,000 or up to six months in county jail, or both. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.3(A). Two or more ODOL assessments in a three-year period constitutes prima facie evidence of willful violation of the law. 85 O.S. Supp. 2001 §63.3(B).

CONCLUSION

Part of ODOL’s mission is to ensure compliance with Oklahoma’s mandatory workers’ compensation insurance requirements. Employers are entitled to exemptions imbedded in the law, but cannot circumvent the intent of the law. ODOL strives to apply the law fairly, firmly and, where warranted, vigorously. A good understanding by businesses of their legal obligations can help them avoid expensive pitfalls and penalties in the future.

The author wishes to acknowledge the assistance of Amy Cameron with the Oklahoma Department of Labor Information Technology office in the preparation of this article.

1. The Employment Standards Division also handles wage and hour and child labor cases.

2. The status of Native American tribes as employers is not directly discussed in the act. The policy applicable to them has largely been established by an Opinion of the Attorney General. “Federally recognized Indian tribes are not required to purchase workers’ compensation insurance for their employees. Nevertheless, when a federally recognized Indian tribe has voluntarily purchased workers’ compensation insurance to protect its employees, those employees may make claims against the insurance carrier in the Workers’ Compensation Court. In such cases the court has jurisdiction to entertain such matters, and an insurer who has accepted premiums on the basis of the claimant’s wages is estopped from denying coverage.” 2006 OK Ag 4.

Because coverage is optional on the part of the tribe, the Department of Labor does not have jurisdiction to penalize a tribe for failure to provide coverage for its employees.

3. In Sport O’Kings Farms v. Thomas, 1990 OK CIV APP 75, 797 P.2d 1016, the Court of Civil Appeals adopted the following definition: “Agriculture, in the broad and commonly accepted sense, may be defined as the science or art of cultivating the soil and its fruits, especially in large areas or fields, and the rearing, feeding, and management of livestock thereon, including every process and step necessary and incident to the completion of products therefrom for consumption or market and the incidental turning of them to account.” 2 Am.Jur. 395, cited in Chapman v. Koenig, 205 Okla. 402, 404, 238 P.2d 357, 358 (1951). The court concluded that the breeding and raising of thoroughbred horses for racing purposes did not constitute an agricultural activity for the purposes of this exception.

4. Section 2.4 is almost identical to Section 2.3, which referred to programs administered by the “Department of Institutions, Social and Rehabilitative Services,” the agency’s name from 1970 to 1980 when Section 2.4 was adopted. The last sentence concerning nursing homes was also added in 1980. It seems reasonable to infer that the Legislature intended to replace Section 2.3 with Section 2.4, although both sections officially remain in the statute books.

5. The Form 3 is the “Employee’s First Notice of Accidental Injury and Claim for Compensation.” Injured employees file the Form 3 with the Oklahoma Workers’ Compensation Court to begin their case. Upon receipt of the Form 3, court staff checks for a matching insurance carrier on their employer database. If no carrier is found, a referral is made to ODOL.

6. From 2006 through 2010, over 53 percent of ODOL’s new cases were the result of Form 3 filings with no matching insurance coverage. Other sources included 17.6 percent from whistleblowers, 7.6 percent from wage and hour cases, 3.9 percent from follow-up compliance reviews and 3.75 percent from notifications of cancellations.

7. Section 63.2(A) of Title 85 provides that “a summary hearing shall be conducted by a hearing officer designated by the Commissioner of Labor.” Because a summary hearing is not a full APA individual proceeding, ODOL is not required to use an administrative law judge or even an attorney for that purpose. However, the current practice is to use an administrative law judge for all dockets, largely because both summary and formal hearings are set on the same docket.

8. Counsel should not mistake this casual environment as a waiver of their ethical obligations. A summary hearing is a tribunal as contemplated by Rule 3.3, Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct. Clients and witnesses are under oath. Any attempts to commit or suborn perjury or present false evidence, once discovered, have been and will be referred to appropriate authorities for prosecution.

He served as an assistant attorney general for 11 years and was general counsel of the Oklahoma Department of Consumer Credit before joining ODOL in 2007. He is a graduate of the University of Washington and Oklahoma City University College of Law, where he received the American Jurisprudence Award in administrative law.
Employers can expect to see a new kind of Title VII retaliation claim after the Supreme Court’s recent decision in Thompson v. North American Stainless, 562 U.S. ___, 131 S.Ct. 863 (2011). Eric Thompson and his fiancée (now wife) were both employed by North American when Thompson’s fiancée filed a charge of discrimination with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission alleging sex discrimination. Three weeks after North American received notice of the charge, the company terminated Thompson for performance problems.1

After his termination, Thompson sued North American,2 claiming the company had violated the anti-retaliation provisions of Title VII by terminating him in order to retaliate against his fiancée for filing her EEOC charge. The district court granted summary judgment in favor of North American, holding that Title VII does not permit third-party retaliation claims.3 The 6th Circuit reversed.4 However, after a rehearing en banc, a divided 6th Circuit affirmed the district court’s grant of summary judgment. Specifically, the 6th Circuit held that Thompson was not protected by the anti-retaliation provisions of Title VII because he had not engaged in any protected activity himself.5

The U.S. Supreme Court granted certiorari, and in an opinion written by Justice Scalia, the court unanimously6 held that Thompson had a right to sue for retaliation. The court had “little difficulty” concluding that if the facts as alleged by Thompson were true, Thompson’s termination violated Title VII.7 In reaching this conclusion, the court relied on the broad standard set forth in Burlington Northern & Santa Fe Railway Co. v. White.8 In Burlington Northern, the court held that a plaintiff must show the alleged retaliatory conduct was “materially adverse” — meaning that a reasonable person may be dissuaded from making or supporting a charge of discrimination. Applying this standard to the facts in Thompson, the court held it was “obvious” that a reasonable worker might be dissuaded from engaging in protected activity if the worker knew that his fiancée would be terminated.9 In holding that third-party retaliation claims are actionable, the court declined to adopt a bright line rule regarding how far third-party retaliation claims may stretch. Instead, the court concluded that terminating “a close family member” will likely always dissuade a reasonable worker from engaging in... protected activity whereas “inflicting a milder reprisal on a mere acquaintance” will likely not. The court emphasized that Title VII’s anti-retaliation provision for judging harm must be objective and not based on a plaintiff’s subjective feelings.

Further, the second part of the court’s opinion answered the more difficult question of whether Thompson — who had not engaged in protected activity while employed — had standing to sue North American. The court held that Thompson could bring a claim against North American because he was “an aggrieved person” within the meaning of Title VII, which seeks to protect employees from their employer’s unlawful actions. Specifically, the court reasoned that Thompson was in the “zone of interests” protected by Title VII because Thompson was an employee of North American and terminating him was North American’s intended means of harming Thompson’s fiancée — the employee who engaged in the protected activity. Thus, even though Thompson did not engage in protected activity himself, he could bring a retaliation claim against North American.

Prior to the court’s holding in Thompson, there was a disagreement among the various courts as to whether third-party retaliation claims were actionable.

While Thompson makes clear that third-party retaliation claims are now cognizable, employers are left to guess how far a court will extend a retaliation claim given the fact the Supreme Court declined to establish a bright line test. For example, will courts extend Thompson’s holding to relationships such as co-worker friendships — an issue the court recognized but purposefully left unresolved? Indeed, at least one district court has extended the first part of Thompson’s holding to a co-worker friend situation. Specifically, the District Court for the District of Columbia allowed an employee to proceed past summary judgment on his retaliation claim where the employee alleged he had engaged in protected activity and his employer responded by threatening to fire his “best friend” co-worker.

Thus, in light of Thompson’s unclear and potentially far-reaching scope, employers should review their anti-retaliation policies to ensure that the language is broad enough to prohibit third-party retaliation and should train supervisors to understand that retaliation against any employee is prohibited.

Electronic Cigarettes: It’s Time to Include Them in Your Tobacco Use Policy

By Abby Dillsaver

Electronic Cigarettes (e-cigs) are a smokeless tobacco product that has taken the nation’s smoking population by storm. It’s only a matter of time before you see an employee “lighting” up an e-cig in the office. Employers need to address these new smoking devices so employees know when and where they can use them.

ELECTRONIC CIGARETTES: AN INTRODUCTION

E-cigs mimic the effects of smoking, from holding the cigarette to the smoke-like vapor they emit. These cigarette look-alikes contain a battery-powered cylinder that holds nicotine-filled cartridges. The cylinder is designed to resemble a real cigarette. When operated, the cylinder vaporizes a liquid nicotine mixture, which the user inhales and exhales through the mouth. The resulting vapor looks like the smoke from a traditional cigarette, which has led to e-cig use being referred to as “vaping.” E-cigs come in different flavors and different concentrations of nicotine.

Marketed as a healthier alternative to smoking because nicotine is delivered without any accompanying tar or smoke, e-cigs proclaim they can be used anytime and anywhere. Employee smokers have taken this marketing at its word and are supplementing or replacing their traditional cigarettes with e-cigs, believing them not only safer but also not covered by traditional employer tobacco policies. Given this popularity, it’s time to revise your tobacco use policy to include e-cigs.

EMPLOYER RISKS IF E-CIGS ARE USED INDOORS

If you haven’t seen e-cigs at your work, you will. Their use has been on the rise since they first appeared on U.S. shelves several years ago. And given many user testimonials that e-cigs help to quit smoking, more and more smokers are swapping their traditional cigarettes for e-cigs.

While you may gain some productivity by allowing “vaping” inside, that productivity may be counterbalanced by negative effects on health, professionalism and employee satisfaction. Given their novelty, e-cigs have not been thoroughly studied to determine what, if any, harmful effects they may pose to those using them much less what effect the second-hand vapors may cause, making an employer’s potential liability as unknown as the effects of e-cigs. Allowing “vaping” indoors may subject you to lawsuits based on alleged health problems caused by the vapors and fumes, from mere irritation to more serious issues such as breathing problems and possibly cancer. But there are reasons to include “vaping” in your tobacco use policy in addition to the unknown health effects.

Second to health risks are the appearances of professionalism and a healthy business environment. Even though e-cigs are not traditional cigarettes, employees still look like they are smoking when they use them. That’s the point of e-cigs. Customers and clients may not realize employees are not actually smoking and even if they do, the client may be irritated or offended by employees who “vap” in front of them.

“Vaping” inside the office may also lead to complaints from co-workers who notice an odor despite e-cig’s claim to be odorless or who are otherwise bothered by the vapor. Including e-cigs in your tobacco policy preserves the status quo and enforces your no smoking policy.

A NEW TOBACCO PRODUCT

Under Sottera Inc. v. U.S. Food and Drug Administration, electronic cigarettes are regulated by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) as a tobacco product, not a drug-device. The impact of this distinction is in the regulatory steps a distributor or manufacturer must go through to market their products in the United States.

In Sottera, two e-cig distributors petitioned the court for a preliminary injunction against the FDA. The FDA had denied entry of the distributors’ e-cigs on the grounds they were “adulterated, misbranded, or unapproved drug-device combinations under the [Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act] FDCA.” The court held that e-cigs were not a drug-device but rather a tobacco product and that the FDA had no authority to regulate them under the FDCA but could regulate them under the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act of 2009 (the Tobacco Act). The FDA has indicated that it will not appeal the decision and will regulate e-cigs classification as a tobacco product places them firmly within the sphere of employers’ tobacco policies.

Tobacco use in the workplace has been restricted for several decades. In 1987, Oklahoma passed the Smoking in Public Places and Indoor Workplaces Act (the act) which banned smoking in indoor workplaces. Indoor workplaces are excluded from this prohibition only if the owner, the immediate family, or smokers are the exclusive workers and the public has only “incidental public access” to the workplace. Given these limitations, most employers are prohibited from allowing employees to smoke inside any indoor workplace.

REVISING YOUR TOBACCO USE POLICY

As an employer, you may restrict employees’ tobacco use more stringently than required by law so long as you do not offend any legal rights an employee may have to use tobacco. Employees do have the right to use tobacco when they are off-duty. Oklahoma employers may not discriminate against their employees who smoke or otherwise use tobacco products. However, employers are certainly free to limit smoking in the workplace. Indeed, most employers are legally required to only allow smoking outdoors under the act. Regulating “vaping” to work breaks outside conforms to the legal requirements for smoking and meets expectations for the use of tobacco products.

As a tobacco product, employers should also consider whether they are legally required to ban indoor “vaping” under the act. The act defines “smoking” as “the carrying by a person of a lighted cigar, cigarette, pipe, or other lighted smoking device.” As e-cigs are derived from tobacco, marketed as an alternative to cigarettes, and the liquid nicotine mixture is heated, or lit, by the battery within the cylinder, they are arguably a “lighted smoking device.” Even if e-cigs are not a “lighted smoking device,” it is foreseeable that the Oklahoma Legislature may amend the act to specifically include e-cig use. Some U.S. agencies, states and municipalities have banned or are considering banning e-cig use. The U.S. Department of Transportation has proposed regulations to ban the use of e-cigs during flights. After public comment and debate over the regulation of e-cig use, Washington State’s Tacoma-Pierce County only permits vaping where minors are lawfully prohibited, non-public workplaces and retail outlets that exclusively sell e-cigs. Boston’s Board of Health has preliminarily approved regulations to treat the sale and consumption of e-cigs like tobacco products, including banning their use in the workplace. The San Francisco Health Commission has also endorsed similar proposed regulations. And the New York and New Jersey Assemblies have introduced bills that would similarly prohibit e-cig use.

All these issues should be considered when revising your tobacco use policy to cover e-cigs.
Specifically listing electronic cigarettes in your policy leaves no doubt they are covered. You should also evaluate revising the policy to include a broader definition of tobacco use, if one is not already used. A broad definition will ensure that future tobacco products are covered. Whether you explicitly name electronic cigarettes in your policy or simply decide the policy already covers their use, employees should be informed that e-cigs are covered and may only be used outdoors or in designated areas.

As an employer, it’s important to be proactive when protecting your employees’ health, the welfare of the company, and yourself against legal liabilities. Don’t wait until “vaping” inside becomes a problem. Act now and revise your tobacco policy to address e-cig use.

She is admitted to practice in Oklahoma, the Western District of Oklahoma and the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.
Sweeping changes to Oklahoma’s Anti-Discrimination Act (OADA) mean that Oklahoma employers will no longer face status-based Burk public policy tort claims. In a dramatic overhaul of the OADA, Senate Bill 837, signed by Gov. Fallin on May 18, 2011, and effective Nov. 1, 2011, prescribes an exclusive statutory cause of action for plaintiffs seeking to assert claims for violations of the OADA. The bill expressly abolishes common law tort remedies for status based discrimination claims and abrogates the Oklahoma Supreme Court’s decisions extending the Burk tort to all victims of status based discrimination. Under the revised OADA, plaintiffs asserting a claim for workplace discrimination are precluded from pursuing a Burk tort cause of action and must bring their claim under the OADA, which provides significantly less attractive remedies than are available under Burk or federal law.

THE GENESIS AND EVOLUTION OF THE BURK PUBLIC POLICY TORT CLAIM

The Oklahoma Supreme Court first fashioned a public policy exception to the employment “at-will” rule in Burk v. K-Mart Corp. Specifically, the Supreme Court recognized a new cause of action in tort in a “narrow class of cases in which the discharge is contrary to a clear mandate of public policy as articulated by constitutional, statutory or decisional law.” Since announcing its decision, the Supreme Court has struggled to define the boundaries of the tort and to clearly articulate when a plaintiff can bring a claim for status-based employment discrimination under Burk, as opposed to a conduct based claim, such as whistle-blowing. Status-based discrimination occurs when an employer discriminates between applicants or employees with respect to an employment decision based on an identifiable characteristic of that employee, such as race, gender, age or disability.

In Tate v. Browning-Ferris Inc., the court considered whether a discharged employee could pursue a Burk claim on the basis of racial discrimination. The court found that the OADA’s statutory remedies were not the exclusive remedies for employment discrimination and the Burk tort remedies existed cumulatively with the statutory remedy provided in the OADA.
for employment discrimination. In Tate, the court noted that the remedies for race discrimination were fewer than those provided for victims of handicap discrimination in that only victims of handicap discrimination have a private right of action under the OADA. Individuals alleging discrimination based on race, color, religion, national origin, and age had only administrative remedies. Based on this dichotomy, the court recognized that the Burk tort was necessary to avoid finding the OADA unconstitutional for treating members of the same class differently. Tate was the first time the court identified this inherent flaw in the OADA and provided the backdrop for a series of decisions by the court left struggling to avoid finding constitutional infirmities in the OADA.

In subsequent cases, the court considered whether a Burk tort claim existed for other types of employment discrimination and ultimately focused its analysis on examining whether the OADA statute provided equal remedies for each category of employment discrimination identified in the act. In List v. Anchor Paint Manufacturing Co., the court declined to recognize a common law claim for wrongful constructive discharge in violation of public policy where the claim is predicated upon the employer’s conduct rather than the employee’s status. The List court further went on to hold that where the employee has an adequate statutory cause of action for wrongful discharge which is sufficient to protect his or her rights, that remedy is exclusive and no common law remedy is available under Burk. In other words, the court concluded that a discharged employee asserting a claim of age discrimination could not bring those claims as a Burk tort cause of action because plaintiffs have adequate remedies for age discrimination under the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA).

Again in Marshall v. OK Rental & Leasing Inc., the court concluded that a constructively discharged employee could not assert a public policy tort claim based on sexual harassment and gender discrimination against the former employer because Title VII provided adequate statutory remedies. In Marshall, the court distinguished Tate by noting that at the time of Tate, Title VII did not provide adequate remedies, but that since that time Title VII had been amended to allow for jury trial and for compensatory and punitive damages. With its opinion, the court seemed to foreclose plaintiffs from asserting a claim of status-based employment discrimination under Burk.

In Collier v. Insignia Commercial Group, the court did what appeared to be an about-face and effectively overruled List and Marshall in allowing a Burk tort claim for sexual harassment. The court focused solely on the adequacy of the state remedy and held that because the OADA does not allow private suits for sexual harassment, plaintiffs who allege wrongful discharge as a result of sexual harassment may state a cause of action under the common law tort theory recognized by the court in Burk. Based on the disparity of remedies under the OADA, the court concluded that the Legislature could not have intended the administrative remedies to be plaintiff’s “exclusive remedy.” An interpretation otherwise, according to the court, would accord “asymmetrical remedies to members of a single class of employment-discrimination victims” and render the OADA unconstitutional. The court distinguished its earlier decision in Marshall on grounds that the conduct in that case involved conduct by a coworker, not a supervisor.

In Clinton v. State ex rel. Logan County Election Board, the court attempted to clarify its Burk tort analysis and again considered the availability of federal statutory remedies. The court stated that, first, a plaintiff must identify a clear public policy that was violated by the employer’s termination of the plaintiff, then, courts are to examine whether a federal or state statute is sufficient to protect the public policy goal. According to the Clinton court, no Burk tort exists if there is an adequate federal or state statutory remedy. A complete ban on Burk torts for status-based plaintiffs, however, was specifically rejected.

The Supreme Court came full circle in Saint v. Data Exchange Inc., and reversed its holding in List by recognizing a Burk claim for age discrimination. In examining the inherent flaw in the OADA, the court found that age discrimination victims are part of the employment discrimination class and that the OADA must provide the same remedies for each member of this broad class of victims of discrimination as available to victims of handicap discrimination. Shirazi v. Childtime Learning Center Inc., confirmed that the Burk tort is available to all victims of status-based discrimination.

The Supreme Court’s decisions sculpting the contours of status-based Burk tort claims have been widely divergent, with the court landing on the bright-line rule that a plaintiff would be allowed to assert a Burk tort claim in all cases where the plaintiff asserts a status-based discrimination claim.26 In direct response, the Oklahoma Legislature enacted significant changes to the OADA. The provisions of the revised OADA rein in the use of the Burk tort by providing an exclusive statutory remedy for plaintiffs asserting status-based claims.

THE NEW OADA

The revised OADA prohibits discrimination by employers on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, religion, creed, age or disability.27 Additionally, discrimination on the basis of genetic information was added to the amended OADA, bringing the Oklahoma law in line with the federal Genetic Information Non-Discrimination Act (GINA), which became effective in 2008.28 The amended OADA provides the exclusive remedy for individuals alleging status-based discrimination and specifically states that "any common law remedies are hereby abolished."29 Consequently, common law causes of action such as the Burk tort are no longer available to individuals seeking redress for status-based discrimination.

Under the revised OADA, the definitions of "employer" and "employee" have both been revised. An "employer" subject to the statutory claims now includes legal entities, institutions, or organizations, but not individuals.30 The definition of "employee" now specifically excludes independent contractors.31 Notably, however, the revision does not limit the liability of employers based on the size of their organization, reflecting the Supreme Court’s decision in *Smith v. Pioneer Masonry Inc.*32 that employers of all sizes are subject to claims of employment discrimination under the Oklahoma Constitution.

Procedurally, in order to enforce this statutory right, a complaining party must first file a charge of discrimination with the Oklahoma Human Rights Commission or the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission within 180 days of the alleged discriminatory act and await a determination from those agencies as to whether they will pursue the action or will issue a Notice of Right to Sue.33 If a charge of discrimination is not resolved within 180 days of filing a charge, the complaining party may demand a Notice of Right to Sue in order to proceed with the action in court.34

Once the suit is commenced, employer defendants “may allege any defense that is available” under the federal anti-discrimination statutes, including Title VII, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, the Rehabilitation Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act and/or GINA.35 Importantly, the remedies available to a successful plaintiff are far more restrained than those available under federal statutes or previously available under the Burk tort for claims of status-based discrimination. While a court may still issue a prohibitory or mandatory injunction requiring the employer to comply with the OADA, including reinstatement or hiring of employees,36 a successful plaintiff may now only recover damages for “backpay and an additional amount as liquidated damages.”37 A court in considering this award will offset that amount with the interim earnings or the amounts earnable with “reasonable diligence” by the party discriminated against.38 Explicitly absent from the OADA are emotional distress damages and punitive damages, further reducing the potential liability an employer may face. Attorney fees, however, may be awarded to either a prevailing plaintiff or a prevailing defendant.39

POTENTIAL EFFECTS OF THE REVISIONS

The amended OADA is tantamount to tort reform in the labor and employment context, ushering in a new, post-Burk era for status-based employment discrimination claims in Oklahoma courts. Importantly, these amendments may discourage plaintiffs from exclusively pursuing OADA claims because more lucrative remedies are available under the federal statutes. Consequently, there will likely be a reduction in employment discrimination claims litigated in state court, as plaintiffs that file OADA claims along with federal claims in state court will face removal by employer defendants.

In sum, status-based Burk tort claims are not long for Oklahoma courts. Once the amended OADA takes effect on Nov. 1, 2011, plaintiffs seeking redress for status-based discrimination must file federal discrimination claims to obtain the types of lucrative remedies that were once available in Burk tort actions.

Earlier this year, Judge Roger Titus of the District of Maryland dismissed the case United States v. Stevens. Lauren Stevens, a former Vice President and Associate General Counsel at GlaxoSmithKline, had been indicted based upon her involvement in responding to an FDA inquiry.

Ms. Stevens’ purported crime? The government alleged that she sent to the FDA six substantive letters that contained false statements and obstructed justice by misleading the FDA concerning GSK’s promotion of one of its prescription drugs.

Could this happen to you?

You are invited to come to the OBA Health Law Section Meeting to hear about Ms. Stevens’ experience and “lessons learned” in a discussion moderated by Professor Marguerite Chapman of the TU College of Law:

Art Contest Rules

Military-themed art is encouraged in all categories but is not a separate category. Registration forms are due Oct. 17; two forms are needed – the main Annual Meeting registration form and the Art Contest entry form. Entry fee is included with Annual Meeting registration. Printed forms are in this bar journal.

1. Artists may submit entries in each category; however, each artist is limited to two entries per category.
2. Each piece must be the original work of the person entering it.
3. All pieces entered must have been completed within five years of the date of registration (except for military-themed art).
4. Pieces that have received an award in any prior OBA Art Contest are not eligible for resubmission.
5. The name of the artist and the piece must be securely fastened to each piece, whether by sticker on the back or bottom or otherwise.
6. The artists receiving the Artist of the Year Award and the best military-theme art will be requested to attend the Annual Meeting luncheon on Thursday to receive his/her award.

Past Annual Meeting Problems Fixed

Parking — Garage would fill up and no valet parking was available. Not this year! Hotel promises unlimited valet parking for $15 per day. Other options: 1) self park with no hotel stay — $8 per day, 2) self park with hotel stay — free, 3) overflow parking at 100 West 1st St. (Boulder & 1st) only a half block west of the hotel - $5 per day.

Nowhere to go for lunch — If you’re not going to luncheons on Wednesday and Thursday, eat in the hotel’s Daily Grill — or new this year you can catch an OBA shuttle making a continuous loop around to Blue Dome Diner, El Guapo’s Cantina, McNellie’s Public House, Joe Mamma’s, Back Alley Blues and BBQ and Dilly Deli - and back to the hotel.

Annual Meeting App Coming Soon

Yes, that’s right — it’s a first in the association’s 107-year history. In development now is a mobile app that can be downloaded to your iPhone, BlackBerry, Android or iPad. The goal is to launch it two weeks before the meeting. Watch for more details.

2011 Annual Meeting Awards

OBA Awards: Individuals for Whom Awards are Named

NEIL E. BOGAN — Neil Bogan, an attorney from Tulsa, died unexpectedly on May 5, 1990 while serving his term as president of the Oklahoma Bar Association. Mr. Bogan was known for his professional, courteous treatment of everyone he came into contact with and was also considered to uphold high standards of honesty and integrity in the legal profession. The OBA’s Professionalism Award is named for him as a permanent reminder of the example he set.

HICKS EPTON — While working as a country lawyer in Wewoka, attorney Hicks Epton decided that lawyers should go out and educate the public about the law in general, and the rights and liberties provided under the law to American citizens. Through the efforts of Mr. Epton, who served as OBA president in 1953, and other bar members, the roots of Law Day were established. In 1961 the first of May became an annual special day of celebration nationwide designated by a joint resolution of Congress. The OBA’s Law Day Award recognizing outstanding Law Day activities is named in his honor.

MAURICE MERRILL — Dr. Maurice Merrill served as a professor at the University of Oklahoma College of Law from 1936 until his retirement in 1968. He was held in high regard by his colleagues, his former students and the bar for his nationally distinguished work as a writer, scholar and teacher. Many words have been used to describe Dr. Merrill over the years, including brilliant, wise, talented and dedicated. Named in his honor is the Golden Quill Award that is given to the author of the best written article published in the Oklahoma Bar Journal. The recipient is selected by the OBA Board of Editors.

JOHN E. SHIPP — John E. Shipp, an attorney from Idabel, served as 1985 OBA president and became the executive director of the association in 1998. Unfortunately his tenure was cut short when his life was tragically taken that year in a plane crash. Mr. Shipp was

OUTSTANDING LAW SCHOOL SENIOR STUDENT AWARD
Paige Mathews, Oklahoma City University School of Law

Paige Mathews, a native of Lamont, graduated summa cum laude from Oklahoma State University with a degree in journalism and broadcasting in 2005. While at OSU, she was named outstanding graduate of the College of Arts and Sciences, Journalism & Broadcasting outstanding senior and Top Ten Freshmen Woman. She was also named to the President’s Honor Roll for eight semesters and served as feature twirler for the Spirit of Oklahoma State University Cowboy Marching Band. A Regent’s Distinguished and Lew Wentz Scholar, she was a member of the President’s Leadership Council, Mortar Board Senior Honor Society, College of Arts and Sciences Student Council and Student Alumni Board.

Upon graduation, Ms. Mathews obtained a job as producer/safe family reporter for KXII-TV Channel 12 in Sherman, Texas, and was later promoted to chief of the station’s Ardmore, Okla., bureau. Most recently, she served as spokesperson and community outreach manager for Women and Children First: The Center Against Family Violence in Little Rock, Ark.
Ms. Mathews was awarded the Hatton W. Sumners Foundation’s full scholarship in 2009, which allowed her to move home and attend Oklahoma City University School of Law. She currently serves as editor in chief of the Oklahoma City University Law Review and is an intern for the Honorable Valerie Couch, magistrate judge for the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Oklahoma. She is a member of the William J. Holloway Jr. Inn of Court, Phi Delta Phi, Merit Scholars, OCU LAW Innocence Project Committee and the National Trial Competition Team. She has received 10 CALI Excellence for the Future Awards, was named to both the faculty and dean’s honor rolls for four semesters and was awarded Outstanding Law Review Note for her article titled, “Caught Between a Rock and a Hard Place: A Missouri Court’s Tough Choice and the Power to Change the Face of Indigent Defense,” which will be published in an upcoming issue of the Oklahoma City University Law Review.

Ms. Mathews works as a certified aerobics instructor for Jazzercise Center of Edmond in her spare time. After graduation, she plans to work as a litigation associate for the firm of Crowe & Dunlevy in Oklahoma City.

OUTSTANDING LAW SCHOOL SENIOR STUDENT AWARD
Barbara McHugh Moschovidis, University of Oklahoma College of Law

Barbara Moschovidis is a law student at the University of Oklahoma College of Law. She earned her bachelor’s degree in international business and languages at the University of Tulsa, where she was inducted to Phi Beta Kappa.

Ms. Moschovidis serves as the business development editor of the American Indian Law Review, in which her case note regarding the termination of the Osage reservation will be published this fall. She is also a member of the Board of Advocates and has enjoyed numerous moot court experiences while at OU Law. As a first-year student, she competed in the final round of the 1L Moot Court Competition, and she has been selected to compete on the ABA National Appellate Advocacy moot court team for the past two years. Ms. Moschovidis has also taken an active leadership role in the Organization for the Advancement of Women in Law.

Following graduation and the bar exam, Ms. Moschovidis looks forward to returning to her home town of Tulsa, where she will work at the law firm of GableGotwals.

OUTSTANDING LAW SCHOOL SENIOR STUDENT AWARD
Russell Ramzel, University of Tulsa College of Law

Russell Ramzel is from Bartlesville, where he graduated in 2000 from Bartlesville High School. He received his bachelor of arts summa cum laude from the University of Arkansas and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He received his paralegal certificate from the University of Tulsa and worked as a paralegal prior to going to law school.

Mr. Ramzel currently serves as the editor-in-chief of the Energy Law Journal. He also served as an executive editor for the 2010 volume of the ABA Section of Environment, Energy and Resources Law Year in Review. He is a student member of the Council Oak/Johnson-Sontag Inn of Court and is a member of the Phi Delta Phi honors fraternity. He was a member of the college of law’s 2010 National Health Law Appellate Competition team, which won best national brief — and third place overall. The brief will be published in the October 2011 issue of the Journal of Legal Medicine.

His note, “Environmental Review of Permitted Pollution: Communities for a Better Environment v. South Coast Air Quality Management District,” will be published in Volume 32 of the Energy Law Journal. He has also received the John Hager Award for excellence in torts, the George and Jean Price Award for legal reasoning, authorities and writing, the Board of Advocates Award for Outstanding 2L, and CALI awards in contracts, torts, reasoning and writing I & II, legal research, civil procedure I & II, property, professional responsibility and advanced competitions: health law.

After graduation, Mr. Ramzel will join Conner & Winters in its Tulsa office.
EARL SNEED CONTINUING LEGAL EDUCATION AWARD

Noel Tucker, Edmond

Noel Tucker received her undergraduate degree from the University of Central Oklahoma and her law degree from the Oklahoma City University School of Law in 1996.

Ms. Tucker serves on the ABA Family Law Section Council and is a past chair of the OBA Family Law Section and continues to serve as its legislative chair. She has been published and regularly presents in the areas of adoption, paternity, ethics, legislation and guardian ad litem representation, and is also a contributing editor for the OBA Family Law Section Practice Manual.

She also volunteers her services for Trinity Legal Clinic and Legal Aid of Western Oklahoma and is a volunteer with Operation Standby (legal assistance to service members). She is a member of the National Court Appointed Special Advocates Association and served as president of the Oklahoma CASA executive board from 2002-2003.

Phil Tucker, Edmond

Phil Tucker received undergraduate degrees from Oklahoma State University and the University of Central Oklahoma, ultimately graduating from the Oklahoma City University School of Law in 1983.

For the last 20 years, Mr. Tucker has been presenting and/or publishing materials for continuing legal education programs and scholarly articles. He is a past chair of the OBA Family Law Section, served as senior co-editor of the section’s Practice Manual from 2002 to present, and for years has been actively involved in the section’s legislative committee. Mr. Tucker is also a member of the ABA Family Law Section.

He also volunteers his services as the secretary and board member for Trinity Legal Clinic of Oklahoma and Legal Aid of Western Oklahoma. He is an adjunct professor of law, teaching both family law and civil procedure classes, as well as a member of the National Court Appointed Special Advocates Association (CASA).

Both Noel and Phil Tucker volunteer their time and creative efforts to CLE programs and writing scholarly articles. Their presentations are for a variety of program planners including the OBA Family Law Section, OBA CLE Department, Oklahoma Bar Journal, Oklahoma Family Law Practice Manual, Oklahoma County Bar Association and the American Bar Association Family Law Section.

They have collectively presented or co-presented over 45 CLEs and authored or co-authored 20 articles over the last several years. If they are presenting a CLE program, the audience is a fortunate recipient, wrote their nominator. They are the dynamic duo of continuing legal education.

AWARD OF JUDICIAL EXCELLENCE

Judge Millie Otey, Tulsa

Judge Millie Otey was chosen as the recipient of this year’s Judicial Excellence Award because of her contributions to the Tulsa community through the development of pro bono programs. Judge Otey serves as special judge for the Tulsa County District Court.

Through her dedication, the court established the “early settlement” component of the Small Claims Court. Supreme Court-trained mediators are “on sight” in the courtroom four mornings a week to mediate cases involving issues that are deemed appropriate for the mediation process. It has had great success. According to the statistics that were kept, 98 percent of the cases that settled through this process have remained settled.

The nomination for the award remarks that Judge Otey “saw a problem that was affecting the lives of many in our community and she worked tirelessly to find a solution. She never fails to give her time and talents to make our lives better — what else could you ask?” Judge Otey is also commended for being a model of judicial efficiency, her legal scholarship and work ethic.

LIBERTY BELL AWARD
Oklahoma County Law Library, Oklahoma City

The Oklahoma County Law Library is honored this year for its service to the community, both lawyers and laypersons. The library is the largest and most complete county law library in the state, with more than 38,000 volumes available. It provides up-to-date legal reference materials that are often not available in private collections, and they keep many specialized treatises on the shelves that particularly benefit solo and small firm practitioners. It also provides treatises on a variety of topics for pro se patrons.

Venita Hoover serves as director and head law librarian and has served in that position for more than 16 years. She and her staff are dedicated to providing the best possible service to its patrons, while maintaining to be good stewards with the law library funds. Ms. Hoover is particularly recognized for her good management practices, and with the great support of her Board of Library Trustees, has managed to keep a standard of excellence even during the tight budget years. Staff members Corinna Patterson and Cecelia Spain are also recognized for their ability to provide a user-friendly environment for laypersons; while unable to offer legal advice, they often offer assistance on where a pro se litigant may find the information they need. “We try to be able to offer some sort of information to everyone. Often it’s just where to go in the books to find the answers to their questions or where to find something in the courthouse. We can’t always give everyone what they come in for, but we always offer them a way to get more knowledge about what they are asking about, often this is all they need,” said Hoover.

The award nomination points out “there is not another place in our area to receive this kind of service for the public.” The library also provides conference space and other services to pro se litigants meeting with law students and faculty from Oklahoma City University in preparation for waiver divorces. The library is recognized in the nomination for seeing “the benefits received by both those who have offered the service and those who have received it.” The library is also honored for its annual hosting of events during Law Week, especially their sponsorship of Lawyers in the Library in conjunction with Legal Aid Services of Oklahoma and the Oklahoma County bar members. Through this program, free legal advice and referrals were offered in 15-minute sessions on a walk-in basis. The Law Library also co-sponsors programs with the Downtown Metro Library, the Oklahoma County Bar Association and other Oklahoma County offices concerning issues such as expungements, probate, guardianship and landlord/tenant issues. These programs are open to the bar and the public, and many more are planned for next year..

JOE STAMPER Distinguished Service Award

William R. Grimm, Tulsa

William R. “Bill” Grimm of Tulsa is recognized as the winner of the Joe Stamper Distinguished Service Award due to his long-time tireless work for the betterment of the legal profession. He is the president of Barrow & Grimm PC, where he practices as a trial lawyer primarily in business litigation matters, but his volunteer work on behalf of the OBA and the Tulsa County Bar Association is extensive.

Mr. Grimm served as OBA president in 2006 and as vice president in 2004. He also served on the Board of Governors from 1996-1998 and 2004-2007 and currently sits on the Professional Responsibility Commission and has served in the House of Delegates since 1986. He has also served on and chaired numerous committees and task forces and served as OBF Trustee from 2005-2006. His leadership positions in the TCBA are also numerous, serving as its president in 1991-1992, and as president of the Tulsa County Bar Foundation in 1992. He has been a member of the American Bar Association since 1974 and served as a delegate in 1992 and 2005-2006. In 2003, he was selected as a fellow of the ABA. He is a two-time winner of the OBA President’s Award; in 2004 for his efforts in assisting with the creation of the Access to Justice Commission and in 2009 for his chairmanship of the Administration of Justice Task Force. In 2006, he received the OBF President’s Award for outstanding service and has been an OBF Benefactor Fellow since its inception. He has also received numerous honors and service awards from the TCBA, most recently the Gary C. Clark Distinguished Service Award in 2003 for his chairmanship of the Centennial Committee and the TCBA Neil E. Bogan Professionalism Award in 2002.

Mr. Grimm earned his J.D. from the OU College of Law in 1973.

ALMA WILSON AWARD
Robert N. Sheets, Oklahoma City

Robert Sheets was born and raised in St. Louis, Mo. He received a B.A. from Washington University and later attended and graduated from the Oklahoma City University School of Law in 1979. He is a director, shareholder and founding partner of Phillips Murrah in Oklahoma City.

Mr. Sheets has been a volunteer with Oklahoma Lawyers for Children since 2003 representing children in the Juvenile Division of the Oklahoma County District Court. In one case, he was able to obtain an optimal outcome for two children who had been physically abused in a home where domestic violence and substance abuse were rampant. He also serves as the chair of the Oklahoma County Bar Association’s Voices for Children Committee. Through his work, he became involved with a head-start program in the Barrio District called the Carver Mark Twain Head-Start. It began as holiday parties for young children when he learned that many of the children did not have access to books. Accordingly, Mr. Sheets became a fundraiser and engaged his firm to financially support a lending library for the program, providing bilingual and age-appropriate literature. Now, every month, members of the OCBA Voices for Children Committee visit the school to read to young students – and he takes books for the children to keep and take home. Many of the children in the head-start program have no male presence in their lives, and their exposure to “Mr. Bob” as a role model is invaluable.

He has also managed to fit in volunteering with Bethany Children’s Center, a nonprofit hospital caring for children with medical and physical disabilities. He was part of a major fundraiser named “Christmas in Wonderland” that allowed for building a brand new Children’s Center. For the past several years, he has been a member of Legal Aid Service of Oklahoma’s successful Campaign for Justice program to increase funding to support providing legal services to tens of thousands of Oklahoma families in need.

In his community, Mr. Sheets leads a Bible study of youth and adults at Wesley United Methodist Church where he is a member. And for over five years, he was a volunteer baseball coach through the Edmond YMCA. He was a great motivator for the young boys and dedicated himself to the teaching of the sport and also to modeling those character traits essential for success.

Although Mr. Sheets has devoted his professional career to commercial litigation, many Oklahoma children have been the beneficiary of his wit, generosity, determination and compassion.

NEIL E. BOGAN PROFESSIONALISM AWARD
Judge William J. Holloway Jr., Oklahoma City

Judge William J. Holloway Jr. was born in Hugo, Okla. in 1923. He is the son of the late governor and Mrs. William J. Holloway.

His family moved to Oklahoma City in 1927, where he received his elementary education in Oklahoma City public schools, graduating from Classen High School in 1941. He attended the University of Oklahoma for two years before World War II and for one year after serving in the U.S. Army, receiving his B.A. in 1947. He received his LL.B. from Harvard Law School in 1950.

After being in general practice with his father and uncle in Oklahoma City, Judge Holloway served as an attorney in the Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., in 1951 and 1952. He then returned to general practice in Oklahoma City until his appointment by President Johnson as a U.S. Circuit Judge of the 10th Circuit on Sept. 16, 1968. He served as chief judge of the 10th Circuit from September 1984 until September 1991. In 1988, he received the President’s Award from the Oklahoma Bar Association for his 20 years of judicial service. In 1991, he received the Humanitarian Award from the Oklahoma City Region of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. In August 1991, Oklahoma City University conferred an Honorary Doctor of Laws Degree on Judge Holloway.

His courtesy and consideration have become a matter of legend among not only judges but among the practicing bar. It has been observed that in the thousands of opinions Judge Holloway has written, he has never once made a joke. Although, he is not lacking a sense of humor. An acquaintance once asked him just what it is he does as an appellate judge. Without hesitation, he replied, “I seek error. I seek error. And in Judge West’s cases it is not all that hard to find.” All kidding aside, he is adamant that no litigant should ever walk away from what may be their only experience with the courts, and feel that their case was not treated with seriousness and understanding.

His civility and congeniality are contagious. His colleagues are unanimous in pointing to his character and courtesy as one of the chief reasons the 10th Circuit is reputed to be the most harmonious of the courts. He has a gift for treating strongly opposing viewpoints with grace and respect. This quality dates back to his days as a national champion high school debater. Even at that tender age he was marked by his ability to win an argument without losing a friend.

His life does not lend itself to a litany of anecdotes. His story is best reflected in the legion of lawyers, judges and litigants who have seen in him how our legal system performs at its best, and who have, as a result, resolved to aim higher in their own lives and careers.

William G. Paul, who was in private practice with Judge Holloway, noted that in everything he has touched, he has given more than he’s taken. Wherever Judge Holloway has been, that place has been better because of his presence.

JOHN E. SHIPP AWARD FOR ETHICS

Brooke Smith Murphy, Oklahoma City

Brooke Murphy was born and raised in Oklahoma City to a family firmly embedded in law. Her grandfather, uncle and father were all outstanding Oklahoma attorneys, and her father, Homer Smith, became a judge. When she attended college, women did not typically study law and she became a teacher. It wasn’t until a few years later that her family’s profession became her own.

After getting a B.S. from the University of Oklahoma, she enrolled in law school at the University of Wisconsin, graduating magna cum laude in 1975.

Ms. Murphy handles every situation with grace and has long served as a role model to other members of the profession through absolute adherence to ethical ideals in both the practice of law as well as in her personal life. She is a tenacious advocate for her clients and has outstanding courtroom skills that she brings to bear on their behalf. However, although she is a tough advocate, Ms. Murphy always acts ethically and professionally in a way that brings honor to the legal community. She has absolute fidelity to the principals of the ethical practice of law. She deals with others fairly and professionally. You can ask any lawyer or judge who knows her and they will tell you that her word is indeed her bond and you can always rely on what she says.

She also enjoys mentoring other young lawyers. She takes time to train young lawyers in the skills required to practice law at the highest levels and always emphasizes the need to act ethically and honestly in all circumstances. Ms. Murphy has an especially strong influence on the young women of Crowe & Dunlevy. As the first female attorney at Crowe & Dunlevy when she joined the firm in 1975 and its first female partner a few years later, she made the path smoother for those women who followed. Ms. Murphy has the ability to have both a successful career and a family and others have learned from her example.

She exemplifies the type of lawyer that all members of the profession should aspire to emulate.
TRAILBLAZER AWARD
Donald W. Davis Sr., Oklahoma City

Donald Davis was born in Sapulpa where he was an active member of his community. He graduated from Booker T. Washington High School and served in the U.S. Air Force receiving an honorable discharge in 1959. He then earned a B.S. degree from the University of Colorado and his law degree from the University of Wyoming School of Law in 1968.

Mr. Davis practiced criminal and civil law in Oklahoma for 32 years and was the first African American appointed to serve as a municipal special judge in Oklahoma City Municipal Court. He also had the distinction of being considered for a vacancy on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit. His clients were seldom people who would win popularity contests. He represented them not because they were easy to represent but because they had a constitutional right to due process and justice. During his career, he represented 30 defendants accused of capital murder — 29 of those people were not convicted of the capital charges — the single receiving a life sentence rather than death.

During the Civil Rights Movement, he represented the Ministers Alliance Organization, which included the majority of the African-American churches in Oklahoma City. In 1979, Mr. Davis obtained the largest verdict for damages up to that time in the U.S. Court for the Western District of Oklahoma against Pool Mortgage Company on a claim of racial discrimination.

His impact extends beyond Oklahoma. In the ‘70s, he served as lead defense counsel in the joint trial of the infamous Ogden, Utah, “Hi-Fi Murders.” His client was the only defendant in a racially-charged trial who was acquitted of the most serious charges arising out of this horrific crime.

Mr. Davis’ activities are not limited to just the courtroom, however. He has served as a leader in bar organizations devoted to support lawyers in their efforts to help the disadvantaged. He is a founding member of the J.J. Bruce Legal Society, an organization of black trial lawyers and was also a charter member of the Oklahoma Criminal Defense Lawyer’s Association.

Additionally, he spread his influence to non-legal venues as well. An amateur radio operator, he communicated with lawyers and others around the world and served as National President of OMIK Amateur Radio Operators, a worldwide organization. He served on the board of directors of the Urban League and as a state director for the Boy Scouts of America. Mr. Davis is a member of the NAACP and is a 32nd Degree Mason, a trustee at Faith Memorial Baptist Church where he also served as a Sunday School Teacher. He is a 2006 recipient of the Oklahoma Human Rights Award.

While he generally abides by his self-proclaimed retirement status, he recently obtained two judgments in probate cases in a south central Texas county as a pro hac vice attorney for the petitioners.

He has served as a remarkable example to those coming behind him and has directly influenced many of Oklahoma’s current attorneys, judges and African-American leaders. His professional and personal activities have enhanced both the state and bar association’s reputation.

OUTSTANDING COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION

Canadian County Bar Association

The 75 members of the Canadian County Bar Association (CCBA) consist mainly of small-firm members and solo practitioners. Many live and practice in communities located some distance from the Canadian County Courthouse in El Reno. Despite the commute, the association’s monthly meetings are routinely attended by 30-40 members. The association provides the opportunity for its members to fulfill at least a portion of their annual CLE requirements by attending meetings, but the unique composition of the association’s membership also encourages interaction and discourse on a personal level. The involvement of the Canadian County judiciary allows the association to work together with the judges to consider procedural changes and address problems or concerns that sometimes arise during daily courthouse activities. This year, the association and the district court worked collaboratively to seek an OBF grant to remodel an outdated area of the county courthouse. Based on the grant proposal, the bar foundation awarded the county bar more than $16,000 to convert unused library space to small conference rooms to ensure the confidentiality of attorney-client communications. Association members produced a video demonstrating the need for the funds for the remodel offering to provide their own “sweat equity” in the form of construction demolition and securing donated items if needed.

The grant proposal process highlighted the charitable mission of the Oklahoma Bar Foundation, and so impressed the group, that the CCBA applied as a group for OBF fellowship, which was awarded in June. This marks the first time a county bar association has sought membership as an OBF Fellow en masse, and the association now challenges other county bar associations to follow its lead.

That same giving spirit also applied close to home in 2011. A CCBA member’s house was destroyed during the tornadoes that ripped through the area in May. Association members rushed to his aid with offers of food, clothing and financial assistance during his family’s difficult transition to temporary housing. In September, members donated their time and talents to community members when they hosted a wills clinic in Yukon in association with Legal Aid of Oklahoma. Members are also pursuing a mentoring program and have been asked to participate in a school attendance and diversionary truancy program in conjunction with the Canadian County Children’s Justice Center. The association will also host a Veteran’s Clinic in November. The events of this year cap off a revitalization of the CCBA that has taken place over the last three years. The association is also looking ahead to the establishment of a Young Lawyers Division, and anticipates the addition of many more new members in the coming years.

OUTSTANDING COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION

Washington County Bar Association

The 57-member Washington County Bar Association (WCBA) serves attorneys and judges in the three-county area of Washington, Nowata and Osage counties. The WCBA serves its members and community by providing education of the legal system and promoting community service. This year the WCBA embarked on an aggressive campaign to renew pride in the legal profession and understanding and trust in the judicial system. The association started the year with a campaign designed to increase and motivate its membership through personal letters, emails and direct contact with all area attorneys. As a result, the number of WCBA members has steadily increased throughout the year; but even more importantly, the level of involvement of the WCBA membership has significantly improved.

The WCBA took an active role in not only monitoring proposed legislation this past year, but also educating its members, legislators and the general public concerning the ramifications of certain legislation on individual rights and the judicial branch of government. The WCBA closely followed the 2011 legislative session and kept its members informed of any critical developments involving key legislation. While the Legislature was in session, the WCBA hosted a legislative update presentation by the Oklahoma Lawyers Association. WCBA members were also active participants in the OBA’s Day at the Capitol event, and members have regularly engaged in direct communication with area legislators concerning proposed legislation. Following the end of the legislative session, the WCBA continued to provide its members with updated information on the legislative measures which were passed. Members have also received up to eight hours of free CLE by attending the monthly WCBA meetings.

The WCBA made a concerted effort this year to improve the perception and image of lawyers among the general public. Programs aimed at this objective include the development of a Facebook page, a presentation to members on personal responsibility, participation in the annual OBA Ask A Lawyer program, coordinating a Lawyers in the Classroom program, and implementing plans for an art contest this fall aimed at educating elementary school-aged children about the values inherent in our legal system. The WCBA also publicized and invited the general public to a ceremony and reception at the courthouse which unveiled portraits of the Washington County judges and other historical photographs and documents. The WCBA also worked in conjunction with a local poverty alleviation program in presenting a very successful legal forum and panel discussion devoted to “Poverty and the Legal System.” The legal forum received such extraordinary positive feedback that it has prompted plans for follow-up programs in the coming months. In December, the WCBA will participate in a toy drive for needy children.
The Cherokee County Bar Association was selected this year because its members are seen as a great example of what a small county can do during the OBA’s annual celebration of Law Day. All counties are asked to participate in the yearly Ask A Lawyer event in which callers are offered free legal advice, but many small counties are declining to participate citing limited resources. Despite its small size, Cherokee County not only took calls by phone during Law Day, they went above and beyond the call by hosting two separate “in-person” Ask A Lawyer events in their community. Because of their efforts, dozens of walk-in clients at the Cherokee Nation Complex and Northeastern State University received legal assistance during Law Day this year.

The nomination for the award recognized that “the Cherokee County Bar Association truly recognizes the value of Law Day, especially its importance with respect to education and improving access to justice for Oklahomans, and [they] saw an opportunity to make a positive impact on the lives of those in their community.”

A special thanks goes out to the officers of the county bar: Cynthia Burlison, Robert Garcia, N. Cheryl Hamby and Chrissi Ross Nimmo for the hard work and dedication throughout the year.

GOLDEN GAVEL AWARD
Civil Procedure and Evidence Code Committee

The Civil Procedure and Evidence Code Committee is the product of a merger at the beginning of this year between the Civil Procedure Committee and the Evidence Code Committee. Historically, the Civil Procedure Committee has been one of the OBA’s more active standing committees, producing several recommended resolutions each year for consideration by the OBA Board of Governors and House of Delegates.

In recent years, the committee recommended statutory revisions addressing electronic discovery, allowing alternative means for service of process, and addressing the availability of work-product protection for communications with testifying expert witnesses. This year, the committee addressed the “claw back” provisions of the Evidence Code. In addition to these substantial issues, the committee’s members engage in regular review of procedural statutes and rules and provisions of the Evidence Code, looking for efficiencies and areas where these provisions can be made more clear and user-friendly.

The committee’s members represent a broad spectrum of trial lawyers as well as judges and law professors from around the state. Jim Milton, who has chaired the committee since 2006, praised the committee’s members as diligent, hard working and practical. As with all trial lawyers, when there is work to be done, the committee members roll up their sleeves and get to work. When they first learned of this award, the committee’s members noted in particular the contribution of professor Steve Gensler of the University of Oklahoma College of Law, who was instrumental in generating the committee’s e-discovery proposal that became law on Nov. 1, 2010.

One award committee member said, “I don’t think most people understand the time and work that goes into being on this committee. The impact that their work has on real-world issues is quite incredible. I didn’t understand just exactly what and how much they do until I got somewhat involved with the committee.”

OUTSTANDING YOUNG LAWYER AWARD
Molly Aspan, Tulsa

Molly Aspan was selected as this year’s outstanding young lawyer award because of her professionalism, skills and commitment to the profession and her community. Ms. Aspan is a shareholder with the law firm of Hall, Estill, Hardwick, Gable, Golden & Nelson PC in its Tulsa office, where she has practiced since her graduation from the University of Kansas School of Law in 2003. Her primary practice area is employment and labor defense litigation and counseling. She is also admitted to practice in Kansas.
Through her actions, Ms. Aspan embodies the spirit of public service that is the purpose of the OBA Young Lawyers Division. She chaired the OBA YLD in 2010. Under her leadership, she reinvigorated the YLD’s public service projects and instituted several major undertakings. Her year as director began with a YLD director orientation, aimed at providing young lawyer leaders with the tools needed to be effective in carrying out the division’s goals. This was the first orientation in many years. She also imagined and instituted a large-scale Statewide Day of Service, during which young lawyers from across the state met on Law Day 2010 to provide the manpower to update, beautify and restore public libraries, which have been her passion since childhood. Twelve Oklahoma libraries were the beneficiaries of her vision, and the Statewide Day of Service model continued in 2011, with plans to become an annual event targeting different recipients. She also implemented a YLD regional conference in conjunction with young lawyers from Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri in recognition of the importance of networking and learning from other lawyers. Though her year as chair ended, Ms. Aspan continues to be an active YLD member and was unanimously elected to serve as district representative to the ABA YLD for Oklahoma and Arkansas. She also currently serves as the chair of the OBA Disaster Response and Relief Committee and is the Oklahoma and Arkansas coordinator with FEMA for providing disaster legal services to victims of disasters. Her nomination for the Outstanding Young Lawyer Award states that she has inspired and challenged others to be more effective leaders in the bar and in their communities.

Ms. Aspan also serves as membership director of the Council Oak/Johnson-Sontag American Inns of Court and was recognized by the inn in 2009 with the James Sontag Award. In addition, she currently serves on the Board of Directors for Legal Aid Services of Oklahoma and is an active volunteer in many other community organizations.

OUTSTANDING SERVICE TO THE PUBLIC AWARD

Philip F. Horning, Oklahoma City

Philip Horning grew up in Norman and received an economics degree from the University of Oklahoma. In 1963, he began two years of active duty with the U.S. Army and was honorably discharged as a captain in 1968 from the U.S. Army Reserve. He attended the OU College of Law and graduated in 1968 having served on the Law Review.

Mr. Horning had a law practice for 35 years until his retirement in 2003. After his retirement, he focused his energy into helping the young people of Oklahoma City by tutoring at Linwood Elementary School. It was here in 2003 where he found his new passion — tutoring one child one hour per week — to now up to six kids every week. The relationship between him and his students is evident by the way they respond to him. His patience and sincere interest in their struggles and achievements makes him much more than a tutor, he is a mentor. Representatives from Linwood reflect that the students who have moved on to middle school ask about him and remember the concern and dedication he showed for them. Whenever there is a writing assignment about Linwood teachers and staff, he is always represented. One young man wrote, “Mr. Horning talks to us like we are people he likes.”

His positive experience with Linwood students inspired him to run for the Oklahoma City School Board where he was elected in 2008. He spends 20-30 hours each week on school board work. In addition to his required board work, he makes a point of visiting each school within his district while continuing to tutor. He describes his service on the board as a labor of love for which he is well suited and which utilizes his talents. Mr. Horning has become a true spokesman for compromise, competency and excellence for our school system throughout Oklahoma City.

AWARD FOR OUTSTANDING PRO BONO SERVICE

Stanley Evans, Oklahoma City

Stan Evans recently retired as the assistant dean for students at The University of Oklahoma College of Law. There, he maintained an outstanding record of leadership and service to his community. In addition to shaping future members of the bar association, he volunteers extensively within his home community and around the state.

He is a Vietnam veteran who served his country in the U.S. Army for 32 years, rising to the rank of colonel.

Col. Evans was the leader of the legal team for a highly successful annual “Make-A-Will” Clinic at Langston University in Oklahoma City. The clinic is a concerted effort of various organizations and churches to encourage the protection of black family wealth through the making of wills and estate planning. Sixty-two families were assisted this year.

He has also developed several legal career pipeline programs to open awareness and expectations among the disadvantaged youth of Oklahoma. He donates his time to Cherokee Elementary School in Muskogee and has twice brought the entire 5th and 6th grade classes to spend a law day at OU. The children are involved in a mock trial, legal indoctrination and meetings with attorneys and students from similar backgrounds.

He has created similar “law day” programs with schools in both Norman and Oklahoma City, and with Upward Bound at both OU and Langston Universities. Mr. Evans’ contagious positivi ty and compassion are great examples of how one person can change the way someone feels or the way something can get accomplished.

This year, he was also deeply involved with the OBA’s Military Assistance Task Force and Oklahoma Lawyers for America’s Heroes. He organized law student support for the OBA’s legal assistance to deploying 45th Brigade Soldiers in Operation Yellow Ribbon and personally took on pro bono cases for veterans.

As a decorated Army officer, it seems fitting that he act as administrative advisor to the Military Law Society at the OU College of Law. He employs his extensive military network to connect students with internships and postgraduate positions; and to find quality speakers to speak about relationships between the military and the rule of law. He also assists students and leads practitioners in veteran advocacy efforts.

He has served on the school board of Anchorage, Alaska, and has been recognized as “Man of the Year” by organizations in both Tyler, Texas, and Leavenworth, Kan. At Fort Leavenworth, he was the first African-American Garrison Commander and dean of the U.S. Army’s Command and General Staff College.

In 2009, Mr. Evans received the Toastmasters International Communication and Leadership Award for exemplary service to his community, state and nation. He was one of 70 outstanding leaders throughout the world to receive the award that year.

In addition to other activities, both Gov. Keating and Gov. Henry appointed him to the Oklahoma Human Rights Commission. There, he has served as both a board member and as chairman. He has also received the Governor’s Commendation for Service to the state of Oklahoma.

MAURICE MERRILL GOLDEN QUILL AWARD

Jim Drummond, Norman

Jim Drummond receives the Maurice Merrill Golden Quill Award for his article titled “A Natural History of the Leon Good Faith Exception in Oklahoma,” which appeared in the May 14, 2011, issue of The Oklahoma Bar Journal.

Mr. Drummond is a private criminal defense lawyer handling trial and appellate cases at the federal and state level. He recently graduated from Gerry Spence’s Trial Lawyers’ College in Dubois, Wyo. He graduated with a bachelor of arts from Wesleyan University and received his J.D. from the OU College of Law. He also holds a master of arts in creative writing from the City College of New York and has recently published a book of short stories, The Coyotes Forgive You, with Mongrel Empire Press. His poetry has appeared in numerous small literary magazines, including Cross Timbers.

He served as the chief of the Non-Capital Trial Division of the Oklahoma Indigent Defense System from 1998-2007, having been a capital appellate defender with that agency from 1996-1998.

Recently from 2007-2008 he was supervisor of the Oklahoma-Western Capital Habeas Corpus Unit, representing clients in all three Oklahoma federal judicial districts. He is licensed in Oklahoma and Arizona, as well as in all Oklahoma federal district courts, the 5th and 10th Circuit Courts of Appeals and the U.S. Supreme Court.

He is the current chair of the Legal Ethics Advisory Panel of the Oklahoma Bar Association. From 2001-2006 he was a voting member the Oklahoma Sentencing Commission, mandated to make recommendations to the Legislature on sentencing policy and to supervise the Oklahoma Criminal Justice Resource Center. In 2004, he was the inaugural chairperson of the OBA Criminal Law Section, which now boasts over 500 members — prosecutors, defenders and judges. He continues to serve on its board as a past chairman and assistant editor of its quarterly publication, Q&A. He is a Master of the Ruth Bader Ginsburg Inn of Court and a past president of the Cleveland County Bar Association. Mr. Drummond currently serves on the boards of the Oklahoma Criminal Defense Lawyers Association and the Oklahoma County Criminal Defense Lawyers association and is a Benefactor Fellow of the Oklahoma Bar Foundation.
Robert G. Spector receives the Maurice Merrill Golden Quill Award for his article titled “Children and Divorce: A 31-Year Retrospective,” which appeared in the Aug. 6, 2011, issue of The Oklahoma Bar Journal.

Professor Spector is the Glenn R. Watson Chair and Centennial Professor of Law Emeritus at the University of Oklahoma College of Law. He taught courses on family law, children and the law, conflict of laws, evidence, child abuse and neglect. He received his J.D. degree from the University of Wisconsin in 1966. Prior to joining the University of Oklahoma faculty in 1980, he was a member of the faculty of Loyola University of Chicago Law School for 13 years. He has served as a visiting professor at the University of Illinois, the University of North Carolina and Suffolk University in Boston.

Professor Spector writes and lectures extensively on family law topics. He is the author of Oklahoma Family Law: Cases and Materials, Oklahoma Family Law: The Handbook and Oklahoma Family Law: Statutes and Rules Annotated, all published by Imprimatur Press and over 100 articles on family law. He also serves as the associate editor of the Family Law Quarterly, and is a member of the board of editors of Divorce Litigation and the American Journal of Family Law.

He serves as the reporter for the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act and the Family Law Joint Editorial Board for the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. He also is the vice-chair of the Family Law Committee of the International Law Section and serves as a consultant to the Oklahoma Bar Association’s Family Law Section.

He was a member of the governing council of the American Bar Association’s Family Law Section for 10 years. He also chaired the committee on marital torts and served as vice-chair of the Law School Curriculum Committee. He received the Chair’s Award from the OBA’s Family Law Section in 1994 and 1997 for significant contributions to the development of family law and in 1990 was named the Outstanding Family Law Attorney.

Professor Spector also received the Earl Sneed Award for significant contributions to continuing legal education by the OBA in 1991.

known for his integrity, professionalism and high ethical standards. He had served two terms on the OBA Professional Responsibility Commission, serving as chairman for one year, and served two years on the Professional Responsibility Tribunal, serving as chief master. The OBA’s Award for Ethics bears his name.

EARL SNEED — Earl Sneed served the University of Oklahoma College of Law as a distinguished teacher and dean. Mr. Sneed came to OU as a faculty member in 1945 and was praised for his enthusiastic teaching ability. When Mr. Sneed was appointed in 1950 to lead the law school as dean, he was just 37 years old and one of the youngest deans in the nation. After his retirement from academia in 1965, he played a major role in fundraising efforts for the law center. The OBA’s Continuing Legal Education Award is named in his honor.

JOE STAMPER — Joe Stamper of Antlers retired in 2003 after 68 years of practicing law. He is credited with being a personal motivating force behind the creation of OUJI and the Oklahoma Civil Uniform Jury Instructions Committee. Mr. Stamper was also instrumental in creating the position of OBA general counsel to handle attorney discipline. He served on both the ABA and OBA Board of Governors and represented Oklahoma at the ABA House of Delegates for 17 years. His eloquent remarks were legendary, and he is credited with giving Oklahoma a voice and a face at the national level. The OBA’s Distinguished Service Award is named to honor him.

ALMA WILSON — Alma Wilson was the first woman to be appointed as a justice to the Supreme Court of Oklahoma in 1982 and became its first female chief justice in 1995. She first practiced law in Pauls Valley, where she grew up. Her first judicial appointment was as special judge sitting in Garvin and McClain Counties, later district judge for Cleveland County and served for six years on the Court of Tax Review. She was known for her contributions to the educational needs of juveniles and children at risk, and she was a leader in proposing an alternative school project in Oklahoma City, which is now named the Alma Wilson SeeWorth Academy. The OBA’s Alma Wilson Award honors a bar member who has made a significant contribution to improving the lives of Oklahoma children.
2011 President
Deborah Reheard, Eufaula

Deborah Reheard has been in private practice in Eufaula since 1991, litigating in the areas of family law, criminal defense and bar disciplinary defense. Michael C. Turpen will speak on professional advocacy and civility at the Criminal Law Section Luncheon during the OBA Annual Meeting. Mr. Turpen served as Muskogee County District Attorney from 1977 to 1982, and was elected Attorney General for the state of Oklahoma in 1982. Since 1987, Mr. Turpen has been a partner in the law firm of Riggs, Abney, Neal, Turpen, Orbison & Lewis in Oklahoma City. In May 2009, he was appointed as a State Regent by Governor Henry, to serve a nine-year term ending in May 2018. Mr. Turpen is a nationally sought after public speaker, having keynoted conferences of the National Association of Attorneys General, the Fourth Federal Judicial Circuit, and the National and Juvenile Judges’ Association.

The luncheon will also recognize the recipients of the Professional Advocacy Awards, unique in that the nominations must be from the opposing side of litigation. The luncheon will feature an Italian Market buffet, with options of Steak Scallopini and Chicken Marsala, as well as a variety of fresh salads and sauteed fresh vegetables. The luncheon is open to all OBA members. Registrations are requested to be submitted no later than October 26, 2011.

The following resolutions will be submitted to the House of Delegates at the 107th Oklahoma Bar Association Annual Meeting at 10 a.m. Friday, Nov. 4, 2011, at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Tulsa.

RESOLUTION NO. ONE: DISCLOSURE AGREEMENT

BE IT RESOLVED by the House of Delegates of the Oklahoma Bar Association that the Association adopt, as part of its legislative program, as published in the Oklahoma Bar Journal and posted on the OBA website at www.okbar.org, proposed legislation amending 12 O.S. Supp. __, Section 2502, Attorney-Client Privilege. (Requires 60% affirmative vote for passage. OBA Bylaws Art. VIII Sec. 5) (Submitted by the Civil Procedure and Evidence Code Committee.)

Section 1. AMENDATORY. 12 O.S. Supp. __, Section 2502, is amended to read as follows:

A. As used in this section:

1. An “attorney” is a person authorized, or reasonably believed by the client to be authorized, to engage in the practice of law in any state or nation;

2. A “client” is a person, public officer, or corporation, association, or other organization or entity, either public or private, who consults an attorney with a view towards obtaining legal services or is rendered professional legal services by an attorney;

3. A “representative of an attorney” is one employed by the attorney to assist the attorney in the rendition of professional legal services;

4. A “representative of the client” is one having authority to obtain professional legal services, or to act on advice rendered pursuant thereto, on behalf of the client; and

5. A communication is “confidential” if not intended to be disclosed to third persons other than those to whom disclosure is made in furtherance of the rendition of professional legal services to the client or those reasonably necessary for the transmission of the communication.

B. A client has a privilege to refuse to disclose and to prevent any other person from disclosing confidential communications made for the purpose of facilitating the rendition of professional legal services to the client:

1. Between the client or a representative of the client and the client’s attorney or a representative of the attorney;

2. Between the attorney and a representative of the attorney;

3. By the client or a representative of the client or the client’s attorney or a representative of the attorney to an attorney or a representative of an attorney representing another party in a pending action and concerning a matter of common interest therein;

4. Between representatives of the client or between the client and a representative of the client; or

5. Among attorneys and their representatives representing the same client.

C. The privilege may be claimed by the client, the client’s guardian or conservator, the personal representative of a deceased client, or the successor, trustee, or similar representative of a corporation, association, or other organization, whether or not in existence. The person who was the attorney or the attorney’s representative at the time of the communication is presumed to have authority to claim the privilege but only on behalf of the client.

D. There is no privilege under this section:

1. If the services of the attorney were sought or obtained to enable or aid anyone to commit or plan to commit what the client knew or reasonably should have known to be a crime or fraud;
2. As to a communication relevant to an issue between parties who claim through the same deceased client, regardless of whether the claims are by testate or intestate succession or by inter vivos transaction;

3. As to a communication relevant to an issue of breach of duty by the attorney to the client or by the client to the attorney;

4. As to a communication necessary for an attorney to defend in a legal proceeding an accusation that the attorney assisted the client in criminal or fraudulent conduct;

5. As to a communication relevant to an issue concerning an attested document to which the attorney is an attesting witness;

6. As to a communication relevant to a matter of common interest between or among two or more clients if the communication was made by any of them to an attorney retained or consulted in common, when offered in an action between or among any of the clients; or

7. As to a communication between a public officer or agency and its attorney unless the communication concerns a pending investigation, claim or action and the court determines that disclosure will seriously impair the ability of the public officer or agency to process the claim or conduct a pending investigation, litigation or proceeding in the public interest.

E. A disclosure of a communication or information covered by the attorney-client privilege or the work-product doctrine does not operate as a waiver if:

1. The disclosure was inadvertent;

2. The holder of the privilege took reasonable steps to prevent disclosure; and

3. The holder of the privilege took reasonable steps to rectify the error including, but not limited to, information falling within the scope of paragraph 4 of subsection B of Section 3226 of this title, if applicable.

F. Disclosure of a communication or information meeting the requirements of an attorney-client privilege as set forth in this section or the work-product doctrine to a governmental office, agency or political subdivision in the exercise of its regulatory, investigative, or enforcement authority does not operate as a waiver of the privilege or protection of undisclosed communications on the same subject unless:

1. The waiver is intentional;

2. The disclosed and undisclosed communications or information concern the same subject matter; and

3. Due to principles of fairness, the disclosed and undisclosed communications or information should be considered together.

G. An agreement on the effect of disclosure in an Oklahoma state court proceeding is binding only on the parties to the agreement, unless it is incorporated into a court order. An Oklahoma state court may order that an attorney-client privilege or work product protection is not waived by disclosure connected with the litigation pending before the court — in which event the disclosure is also not a waiver in any other Federal or State proceeding.

RESOLUTION NO. TWO: CORRECTING REFERENCES TO SECTION 3230

BE IT RESOLVED by the House of Delegates of the Oklahoma Bar Association that the Association adopt, as part of its legislative program, as published in The Oklahoma Bar Journal and posted on the OBA website at www.okbar.org, proposed legislation amending 12 O.S. Supp. ___, Section 3232, Use of Depositions in Court proceedings. (Requires 60% affirmative vote for passage. OBA Bylaws Art. VIII Sec. 5) (Submitted by the Civil Procedure and Evidence Code Committee.)

Section 1. AMENDATORY. 12 O.S. Supp. ___, Section 3232, is amended to read as follows:

A. USE OF DEPOSITIONS. At the trial or upon the hearing of a motion or an interlocutory proceeding, any part or all of a deposition, so far as admissible under the Oklahoma Evidence Code applied as though the witness were then present and testifying, may be used against any party who was present or who was represented at the taking of the deposition or who had reasonable notice thereof, in accordance with any of the following provisions:

1. Any deposition may be used by any party for the purpose of contradicting or impeaching the testimony of deponent as a witness, or for any other purpose permitted by the Oklahoma Evidence Code;
2. The deposition of a party or of anyone who at the time of taking the deposition was an officer, director or managing agent, or a person designated under paragraph 5 6 of subsection C of Section 3230 or subsection A of Section 3231 of this title to testify on behalf of a public or private corporation, partnership or association or governmental agency which is a party may be used for any purpose;

3. The deposition of a witness, whether or not a party may be used for any purpose if the court finds:

   a. That the witness is dead, or

   b. That the witness does not reside in the county where the action or proceeding is pending or is sent for trial by a change of venue or the witness is absent therefrom, unless it appears that the absence of the witness was procured by the party offering the deposition, or

   c. That the witness is unable to attend or testify because of age, illness, infirmity or imprisonment, or

   d. That the party offering the deposition has been unable to procure the attendance of the witness by subpoena, or

   e. That the witness is an expert witness, who for purposes of this section is a person educated in a special art or profession or a person possessing special or peculiar knowledge acquired from practical experience, or

   f. Upon application and notice, that such exceptional circumstances exist as to make it desirable, in the interest of justice and with due regard to the importance of presenting the testimony of witnesses orally in open court, to allow the deposition to be used.

Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to limit the authority of the appropriate office to issue a subpoena to compel an expert witness to appear in the same manner as any other witness;

4. If only part of a deposition is offered in evidence by a party, an adverse party may require the introduction of any other part which ought in fairness to be considered with the part introduced, and any party may introduce any other parts.

   a. Objections to the competency of a witness or to the competency, relevancy or materiality of testimony are not waived by failure to make them before or during the taking of the deposition, unless the ground of the objection is one which might have been obviated or removed if presented at that time.

   b. Errors and irregularities occurring in the manner of the oral examination in the taking of the deposition, in the form of the questions or answers, in the oath or affirmation, or in the conduct of parties, and errors of any kind which might be obviated, removed or cured if promptly presented, are waived unless reasonable objection thereto is made at the taking of the deposition.

c. Objections to the form of written questions submitted under Section 3231 of this title are waived unless served in writing upon the party propounding them within the time allowed for serving the succeeding cross or other questions or within five (5) days after service of the last questions authorized.

4. AS TO COMPLETION AND RETURN OF DEPOSITION. Errors and irregularities:

a. in the manner in which the testimony is transcribed or recorded, or

b. in the manner in which the deposition is prepared, signed, certified, sealed, endorsed, transmitted, filed, or otherwise dealt with by the officer under Sections 3230 and 3231 of this title are waived unless a motion to suppress the deposition or some part thereof is made with reasonable promptness after such defect is, or with due diligence might have been, ascertained.

RESOLUTION NO. THREE: CORRECTING REFERENCES TO SECTION 3230

BE IT RESOLVED by the House of Delegates of the Oklahoma Bar Association that the Association adopt, as part of its legislative program, as published in The Oklahoma Bar Journal and posted on the OBA website at www.okbar.org, proposed legislation amending 12 O.S. Supp. ___, Section 3237, Failure to Make or Cooperate in Discovery — Sanctions. (Requires 60% affirmative vote for passage. OBA Bylaws Art. VIII Sec. 5) (Submitted by the Civil Procedure and Evidence Code Committee.)

Section 1. AMENDATORY. 12 O.S. Supp. ___, Section 3237, is amended to read as follows:

A. MOTION FOR ORDER COMPELLING DISCOVERY. A party, upon reasonable notice to other parties and all persons affected thereby, may apply for an order compelling discovery as follows:

1. APPROPRIATE COURT. An application for an order to a party may be made to the court in which the action is pending, or, on matters, relating to a deposition, to the district court in the county where the deposition is being taken. An application for an order to a deponent who is not a party shall be made to the district court in the county where the deposition is being taken or to the court in which the action is pending.

2. MOTION. If a deponent fails to answer a question propounded or submitted under Section 3230 or 3231 of this title, or a corporation or other entity fails to make a designation under paragraph 56 of subsection C of Section 3230 or subsection A of Section 3231 of this title, or a party fails to answer an interrogatory submitted under Section 3233 of this title, or if a party, in response to a request for inspection and copying submitted under Section 3234 of this title, fails to respond that the inspection or copying will be permitted as requested or fails to permit the inspection or copying as requested, or if a party or witness objects to the inspection or copying of any materials designated in a subpoena issued pursuant to subsection A of Section 2004.1 of this title, the discovering party may move for an order compelling an answer, or a designation, or an order compelling inspection and copying in accordance with the request or subpoena. The motion must include a statement that the movant has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer either in person or by telephone with the person or party failing to make the discovery in an effort to secure the information or material without court action. When taking a deposition on oral examination, the propounent of the question may complete or adjourn the examination before applying for an order.

When a claim of privilege or other protection from discovery is made in response to any request or subpoena for documents, and the court, in its discretion, determines that a privilege log is necessary in order to determine the validity of the claim, the court shall order the party claiming the privilege to prepare and serve a privilege log upon the terms and conditions deemed appropriate by the court. The privilege log shall be served upon all other parties. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, the privilege log shall include, as to each document for which a claim of privilege or other protection from discovery has been made, the following:

a. the author or authors,
b. the recipient or recipients,
c. its origination date,
d. its length,
e. the nature of the document or its intended purpose, and
f. the basis for the objection.

The court may conduct an in camera review of the documents for which the privilege or other protection from discovery is claimed. If the court denies the motion in whole or in part, it may make such protective order as it would have been empowered to make on a motion made pursuant to subsection C of Section 3226 of this title.

3. EVASIVE OR INCOMPLETE ANSWER. For purposes of this subsection, an evasive or incomplete answer is to be treated as a failure to answer.

4. AWARD OF EXPENSES OF MOTION. If the motion is granted, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the party or deponent whose conduct necessitated the motion or the party or attorney advising such conduct or both of them to pay to the moving party the reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order, including attorney fees, unless the court finds that the opposition to the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

If the motion is denied, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the moving party or the attorney advising the motion or both of them to pay to the party or deponent who opposed the motion the reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the motion, including attorney fees, unless the court finds that the making of the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

If the motion is granted in part and denied in part, the court may apportion the reasonable expenses incurred in relation to the motion among the parties and persons in a just manner.

B. FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH ORDER.

1. SANCTIONS BY COURT IN COUNTY WHERE DEPOSITION IS TAKEN. If a deponent fails to be sworn or to answer a question after being directed to do so by the court in the county in which the deposition is being taken, the failure may be considered a contempt of that court.

2. SANCTION BY COURT IN WHICH ACTION IS PENDING. If a party or an officer, director or managing agent of a party or a person designated under paragraph 56 of subsection C of Section 3230 or subsection A of Section 3231 of this title to testify on behalf of a party fails to obey an order to provide or permit discovery, including an order made under subsection A of this section or Section 3235 of this title, or if a party fails to obey an order entered under subsection F of Section 3226 of this title, the court in which the action is pending may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just. Such orders may include the following:

a. An order that the matters regarding which the order was made or any other designated facts shall be taken to be established for the purposes of the action in accordance with the claim of the party obtaining the order,

b. An order refusing to allow the disobedient party to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting him from introducing designated matters in evidence,

c. An order striking out pleadings or parts thereof, or staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed, or dismissing the action or proceedings or any part thereof, or rendering a judgment by default against the disobedient party,

d. In lieu of or in addition to the orders provided for in subparagraphs a through c of this paragraph, an order treating as a contempt of court the failure to obey any orders except an order to submit to a physical or mental examination,

e. Where a party has failed to comply with an order under subsection A of Section 3235 of this title requiring him to produce another for examination, such orders as are listed in subparagraphs a, b and c of this paragraph, unless the party failing to comply shows that he is unable to produce such person for examination,

f. If a person, not a party, fails to obey an order entered under subsection C of Section 3234 of this title, the court may treat the failure to obey the order as contempt of court.

In lieu of or in addition to the orders provided for in this paragraph, the court shall require the party failing to obey the order or the attorney advising the party or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

C. EXPENSES ON EXAMINATION OF PROPERTY. The reasonable expense of making the property available under Section 3234 of this title shall be paid by the requesting party, and at the time of the taxing of costs in the case, the court may tax such expenses as costs, or it may apportion such expenses between the parties, or it may provide that they are an expense of the requesting party.

D. EXPENSES ON FAILURE TO ADMIT. If a party fails to admit the genuineness of any document or the truth of any matter as requested under Section 3236 of this title, and if the party requesting the admission thereafter proves the genuineness of the document or the truth of the matter, the party may apply to the court for an order requiring the other party to pay him or her the reasonable expenses incurred in making that proof, including reasonable attorney fees. The court shall make the order unless it finds that:

1. The request was held objectionable pursuant to subsection C of Section 3236 of this title; or
2. The admission sought was of no substantial importance; or
3. The party failing to admit had reasonable ground to believe that he or she might prevail on the matter; or
4. There was other good reason for the failure to admit.

E. FAILURE OF PARTY TO ATTEND AT OWN DEPOSITION OR SERVE ANSWER TO INTERROGATORIES OR RESPOND TO REQUEST FOR INSPECTION. If a party or an officer, director or managing agent of a party or a person designated under paragraph 56 of subsection C of Section 3230 or subsection A of Section 3231 of this title to testify on behalf of a party fails:

1. To appear before the officer who is to take the deposition, after being served with a proper notice; or
2. To serve answers or objections to interrogatories submitted under Section 3233 of this title, after proper service of the interrogatories; or
3. To serve a written response to a request for inspection submitted under Section 3234 of this title, after proper service of the request; the court in which the action is pending on motion may make such orders in regard to the failure as are just, and among others it may take any action authorized under subparagraphs a, b and c of paragraph 2 of subsection B of this section. In lieu of or in addition to any order, the court shall require the party failing to act or the attorney advising him or her or both to pay the reasonable expenses, including attorney fees, caused by the failure, unless the court finds that the failure was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

The failure to act as described in this subsection may not be excused on the ground that the discovery sought is objectionable unless the party failing to act has applied for a protective order as provided by subsection C of Section 3226 of this title.

F. FAILURE TO PARTICIPATE IN THE FRAMING OF A DISCOVERY PLAN. If a party or a party’s attorney fails to participate in good faith in the framing of a discovery plan by agreement as is required by subsection F of Section 3226 of this title, the court may, after opportunity for hearing, require such party or his or her attorney to pay to any other party the reasonable expenses, including attorney fees, caused by the failure.

G. ELECTRONICALLY STORED INFORMATION. Absent exceptional circumstances, a court may not impose sanctions on a party for failure to provide electronically stored information lost as a result of the routine, good-faith operation of an electronic information system.

RESOLUTION NO. FOUR: CREATION OF STATE OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE TAX HEARINGS

BE IT RESOLVED by the House of Delegates of the Oklahoma Bar Association that the Association adopt, as part of its legislative program, as published in The Oklahoma Bar Journal and posted on the OBA website at www.okbar.org, proposed legislation creating new law to be codified as 74 O.S. Section 9100 et seq. and amending existing laws to create a State Office of Administrative Tax Hearings to have authority to hear Oklahoma tax controversies and to implement an independent Oklahoma Tax Commission internal review and settlement program. (Requires 60% affirmative vote for passage. OBA Bylaws Art. VIII Sec. 5) (Submitted by the chair and a former chair of the OBA Taxation Law Section as members of the association.)

Because of the page length of this resolution, a summary is provided below. The resolution in its entirety is available at www.okbar.org.

An Act relating to revenue and taxation; providing for enactment of the State Office of Administrative Tax Hearings Act to establish within the executive branch of the State government an independent State Office of Administrative Tax Hearings to have exclusive administrative authority to hear and decide taxpayer protests involving assessment or refund of state taxes. The Act would eliminate the necessity for an administrative hearing system within the Tax Commission; and provide an effective date.

Independent Administrative Office and Law
Judges. The Act would create the State Office of Administrative Tax Hearings to independently hear taxpayer protests on state tax matters.
Administrative law judges of this agency would be appointed by the Governor. An individual would have to be an attorney admitted to practice in Oklahoma who has substantial knowldge of Oklahoma state tax law and substantial experience making the record in a tax case for judicial review to be appointed as an administrative law judge.

Informal Independent Review and Settlement
Procedure Within Tax Commission Required.
The Act would also require the Tax Commission to maintain a system for an informal internal administrative appeals function within the Tax Commission separate and independent from the Tax Commission audit function. This provision is comparable to the Internal Revenue Ser-vice’s appeals function, and also incorporates some of the better features of the informal review/settlement programs in other states.

Informal Discovery. The Act requires the Tax Commission and taxpayer to make every effort to achieve discovery by informal consultation or communication, before invoking formal discovery. This would reduce the time and cost for Oklahoma taxpayers.

Requiring Stipulations. The Act requires the Tax Commission and taxpayer to stipulate to all relevant and non-privileged matters to the fullest extent to which complete or qualified agreement can or fairly should be reached. This would reduce the cost for Oklahoma taxpayers by eliminating the need to prove certain facts with testimony from witnesses.

Liberal Rules of Evidence. The Act provides for all relevant evidence, including hearsay, to be admitted if it is probative of a material fact in a tax controversy. This is an important benefit for taxpayers representing themselves pro se or who have tax professionals other than attorneys representing them.

Taxpayers May be Represented by Persons
Other Than Attorneys. In addition to attorneys and accountants, enrolled agents authorized to practice before the IRS would qualify to represent taxpayers in administrative proceedings pursuant to the Act.

Taxpayer’s Burden of Proof is a Preponderance of the Evidence. The Act would adopt the same standard common to civil litigation. This would make it clear that this standard of proof would apply notwithstanding the current “presumption” of correctness by the Tax Commission.

Hearings Held at Locations Convenient to Taxpayers. The Act authorizes the administrative hearings to be conducted at any place within the State, with a view toward providing to taxpayers a more convenient and less expensive opportunity for hearing in a state tax controversy.

Administrative Tax Hearings Decisions. The State Office of Administrative Tax Hearings would be given exclusive jurisdiction and authority for conducting administrative hearings to determine questions of law and fact in taxpayer protests of proposed tax assessments or denials of refunds. However, questions regarding constitutionality of statutes or their application or of Tax Commission regulations would be decided only judicially in the courts by separate action as authorized by statute, or on appeal from an administrative hearing conducted under the Act.

The State, as Well as the Taxpayer, is Allowed to Appeal. Because the Act would establish a separate and independent State Office of Administrative Tax Hearings, the Tax Commission, as well as the taxpayer, would be allowed to appeal to the Supreme Court of Oklahoma.

Small Claims Division for Tax Controversies
Not Exceeding $25,000. The Act would allow, but not require a taxpayer election to have a protest involving an amount not exceeding $25,000 heard in an informal procedure by a Small Claims Division of the State Office of Administrative Tax Hearings. The decisions in informal proceedings of the Small Claims Division would not be appealable. This would reduce the cost of contesting a tax liability for Oklahoma taxpayers.

An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Attorneys from across the state prepare for the fourth Leadership Academy this fall where they will learn leadership skills to boost their careers and better serve their communities. The Oklahoma Bar Association named 35 participants to this year’s multi-session training program.

“It’s important to cultivate leadership in our profession, and we understand that means more than just enhancing careers,” said OBA President Deborah Reheard of Eufaula. “The program builds successful leaders both professionally and personally, and we know this year’s participants will be no different.”

Completing a total of five sessions by April 2012, participants will hear from prominent legal and community leaders in interactive sessions about topics ranging from how to be a good communicator and motivator to how to combat ethical challenges in the legal profession. Other session topic highlights include better understanding the inner workings of the court system, tips for serving on a nonprofit board and much more.

Revered as one of the U.S. Navy’s most inspirational leaders, retired Rear Adm. Greg Slavonic, will begin the first session — Leadership in Action.

“We are very proud of the Leadership Academy program and are excited for this new class of participants to experience it first-hand,” President Reheard said.

Five Honored for Distinguished Service
Mona Salyer Lambird Spotlight Award Recipients
By J. Deborah Bruce

Since 1996 the Spotlight Awards have been given annually to five women who have distinguished themselves in the legal profession and who have lighted the way for other women. In 1998 the award was named to honor the late Mona Salyer Lambird, the first woman president of the Oklahoma Bar Association, and one of the award’s first recipients. The award is sponsored by the OBA Women in Law Committee. Each year all previous winners nominate and select the current year’s recipients. A plaque bearing the names of all recipients hangs at the Oklahoma Bar Center in Oklahoma City. The 2011 recipients are:

Gina L. Hendryx

Gina Hendryx is the general counsel for the Oklahoma Bar Association (OBA) and serves as the association’s counsel on other legal matters. She works with the Professional Responsibility Commission and serves as a liaison to the OBA Board of Governors, OBA committees, the courts and other local and national entities concerning lawyer ethics issues. From 2003 until 2009, Ms. Hendryx served as the OBA’s first ethics counsel fielding questions from OBA members pertaining to ethical dilemmas faced in the day to day practice of law. In addition to the ethics help line, Ms. Hendryx implemented and directed the OBA Discipline Diversion Program, which is designed to provide awareness of ethical obligations and responsibilities. Ms. Hendryx is a frequent lecturer in the areas of professional responsibility and compliance with ethical standards. She has spoken to numerous private, public and governmental sector groups including state and county bar associations, legal services groups and Judge Advocate General training programs. Ms. Hendryx writes a regular column for the Oklahoma Bar Journal on current issues in the area of professional accountability. In her personal time, Ms. Hendryx is an avid scuba diver with more than 1,000 logged dives and holds instructor level ratings with several scuba certification agencies.

Patricia G. Parrish

Since 2004 Patricia Parrish has served as an Oklahoma County district judge. She served as the presiding judge in 2009-2010. She previously served as a special judge and prior to her judicial appointment, she practiced civil law with several law firms including Mullins, Hirsch & Parrish; Musser & Bunch; and Linn and Helms. An accomplished mediator, she has served as a mediator in state and federal court cases and as an arbitrator on insurance issues.

Judge Parrish is a member of the Oklahoma County Bar Association, where she currently serves as vice president. She is a master, William J. Holloway Jr., American Inn of Court, a member of the Oklahoma Trial Judges Association and was co-chair of the OCBA Voices for Children Committee. She has served on the board of directors for the City Rescue Mission and the Downtown Exchange Club for Prevention of Child Abuse. She has also participated in Leadership Oklahoma City. In 2007 she was the recipient of the Journal Record Leadership in Law Award. She was appointed by Gov. Henry to serve on the Adoption Task Force. In 2008 she was inducted into the Hennessy High School Hall of Fame. Judge Parrish is one of the most highly regarded judges in Oklahoma County. She is always in charge of her courtroom while treating all participants, lawyers and litigants alike, with appropriate civility and respect.

Susie Pritchett (posthumous award)

Until her untimely death this year, Susie Pritchett had served as associate district judge for Kingfisher County from 1994 until her retirement in January 2011. She began her legal career as the first female assistant public defender in Oklahoma County and later as the first female assistant United States attorney for the Western District of Oklahoma. She was one of the government lawyers on the Karen Silkwood case and her list of prosecutions reads like the who’s who of the notorious in Oklahoma. She also served as a chief administrative law judge and as a temporary intermediate Court of Criminal Appeals judge. She was a member of the Kingfisher County Bar Association, where she served as president, and she was a member of the Oklahoma County Bar Association, where she served on the board of directors. She was a member of the National Association of Women Judges, Ruth Bader Ginsburg Inn of Court, American Inns of Court and the Federal Bar Association. For many years Judge Pritchett was elected by her fellow judges to serve on the Oklahoma Judicial Conference Executive Committee and to represent them as a delegate at the OBA annual meetings. Over the years Judge Pritchett received numerous awards and commendations from organizations including the FBI, IRS, ATF, YWCA and Oklahoma Women’s Hospitality Club.

Susan B. Shields

Susan Shields is an attorney with McAfee & Taft in Oklahoma City, where she is the leader of its tax practice group. Ms. Shields’ experience and expertise have earned her recognition in The Best Lawyers in America and Oklahoma Super Lawyers, where she has been consistently named to its prestigious “Top 25 Female” and “Top 50 Oklahoma Lawyers” lists. She has also been recognized as Outstanding Pro Bono Lawyer by Legal Aid of Western Oklahoma, received the OBA Earl Sneed Award and was named to the Journal Record’s list of Leadership in Law honorees. Ms. Shields is also a two-time finalist for the Journal Record’s Woman of the Year Award. Ms. Shields is a frequent lecturer on estate planning and nonprofit issues and serves as an adjunct professor of law at the University of Oklahoma College of Law. She is currently serving a three-year term as a member of the OBA Board of Governors. For many years she has also served as a Trustee of the Oklahoma Bar Foundation and is currently a member of its Executive Committee. Ms. Shields is a Fellow of the American College of Trust and Estate Counsel and a member of the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation’s planned giving council. She heads the Central Oklahoma Stanford Alumni Club, is a graduate of Leadership Oklahoma and has served as a board member for numerous community and volunteer boards.

Betty Outhier Williams

Betty Outhier Williams heads the Betty Outhier Williams Law Office in Muskogee. She practices civil litigation with an emphasis in federal and bankruptcy courts. She received her law degree from Vanderbilt University in 1972 and was one of a very few women graduating from an Ivy League university. She was the first female assistant U.S. attorney in any district of Oklahoma. She also served as the U.S. attorney for the Eastern District. She served as a Trustee of the Oklahoma Bar Foundation for nine years. The OBF Board of Trustees changed the rules so that she was eligible to serve as president. Ms. Williams served on the OBA Board of Governors and on the Oklahoma Bar Journal Board of Editors. She has twice served as a justice on the Oklahoma Judicial Appeals Tribunal, where she presently serves as vice chief justice. She was a Reginald Heber Smith Fellow in Tulsa. On the local level she has been president of the Muskogee County Bar Association and for 20 years has served on the Muskogee County Library Committee. She has twice been voted best attorney in Muskogee and has twice been named as an Oklahoma Super Lawyer. She is a member of the Defense Research Institute, Oklahoma Association of Defense Counsel, adjunct settlement judge for the Eastern District and is a Fellow of the Council on Litigation Management.

Ms. Bruce is the OBA Women in Law Committee chairperson.

OBA Needs Volunteers for 2012 Committees

Teamwork makes things happen and that’s very true for all our OBA committees. If you’re not yet a committee member, I urge you to get involved. There’s no better way to network among colleagues — and isn’t that an investment in your career worth the time out of the office?

The variety of committees makes it easy to find something you are interested in. Pick one and help me make a difference. I need you on my team.

If you work in or around Tulsa, videoconferencing from there with the bar center in Oklahoma City saves travel time. We want your participation.

It’s easy to sign up online at www.okbar.org. You can also complete this form and either fax or mail it to the OBA. I need to start working on committee appointments soon, so please respond by Dec. 1, 2011.

Oklahoma Bar Association
2012 Proposed Budget

Pursuant to Article VII, Section 1 of the Rules Creating and Controlling The Oklahoma Bar Association, Cathy M. Christensen, President-Elect and Budget Committee Chairperson, has set a Public Hearing on the 2012 Oklahoma Bar Association budget for Thursday, Oct. 20, 2011, at 4 p.m. at the Oklahoma Bar Center, 1901 N Lincoln Boulevard, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

The purpose of the OBA is to engage in those activities enumerated in the Rules Creating and Controlling the Oklahoma Bar Association (the Rules) and the OBA Bylaws (the Bylaws). The expenditure of funds by the OBA is limited both as set forth in the Rules and Bylaws and in Keller v. State Bar of California, 496 U.S. 1 (1990). If any member feels that any actual or proposed expenditure is not within such purposes of, or limitations on the OBA, then such member may object thereto and seek a refund of a pro rata portion of his or her dues expended, plus interest, by filing a written objection with the executive director. Each objection must be made in writing on an OBA Dues Claim Form, addressed to the Executive Director of the OBA, P.O. Box 53036, Oklahoma City, OK 73152, and postmarked not later than Sixty (60) days after the approval of the Annual Budget by the Oklahoma Supreme Court or January 31st of each year, whichever shall first occur. Objection procedure and form are available at www.okbar.org/members/budget.htm.

Upon receipt of a member’s written objection, the executive director shall promptly review such objection together with the allocation of dues monies spent on the challenged activity and, in consultation with the president, shall have the discretion to resolve the objection, including refunding a pro rata portion of the member’s dues, plus interest or schedule a hearing before the Budget Review Panel. Refund of a pro rata share of the member’s dues shall be for the convenience of the OBA, and shall not be construed as an admission that the challenged activity was or would not have been within the purposes of or limitations on the OBA.

Editor-in-Chief
In an effort to protect personal identifier information in court documents, the Oklahoma Supreme Court is considering the attached proposed order creating Rule 31 of the Rules of the District Courts of Oklahoma. The court has studied this issue for several years and the courts will continue to gather personal identifier information for the business needs of the court.

The court invites your written comments on this matter on or before Nov. 4, 2011. The court will consider your input before it considers a final order.

Thank you for taking the time to comment on this important public policy topic. Your written comments may be sent to:

Sincerely,
Michael D. Evans
Administrative Director of the Courts

2011 OK

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF OKLAHOMA
In re Amendment to 12 O.S. Ch. 2, App.,
Rules for the District Courts of Oklahoma,
SCAD NO. 2011-
FOR OFFICIAL PUBLICATION

¶0 Order Creating new Rule 31, Rules for the District Courts of Oklahoma.

¶1 The Court hereby creates Rule 31, 12 O.S. Ch. 2, App., Rules for the Districts Courts of Oklahoma.

¶2 Rules of the District Courts of Oklahoma, Rule 31, is created to read as follows.

Rule 31, Personal Identifier Information on Court Documents
A. Personal Identifier Information

Every party to an action shall omit, or where inclusion is necessary shall include, only the following personal identifier information in all pleadings, papers, exhibits or other documents, whether filed electronically or in paper, unless otherwise ordered or as otherwise provided by law (i.e. 22 O.S. 977):

1. Social Security Numbers: An individual’s social security number shall include only the last four digits.

2. Taxpayer Identification Numbers: A taxpayer identification number shall include only the last four digits of that number.

3. Names of Minor Children: Only the initials of a minor child shall be used. In the alternative, the filer may refer to the child in the manner that shields the identity of the minor in the context of the proceeding (i.e., by symbol [Child A, Child B]; as Doe 1, Doe2; or by the child’s status in the litigation [/Witness, Victim, Ward, Beneficiary]).

4. Dates of Birth: An individual’s date of birth shall include only the year.

5. Financial Account Numbers: Financial account records shall include only the last four digits of these numbers.

6. Home addresses: A home address shall include only the city and state.

7. Driver’s License: An individual’s driver’s license shall include only the last four digits of that number.

8. Other Personal Identification Numbers: Any other personal identification number shall include only the last four digits of that number.

B. Responsibility of Filer

The responsibility for following the guidelines set forth above rests solely with counsel, the parties, or any other filer. The Clerk of the Court will not review documents for compliance with this rule, seal documents or redact documents. If a filer includes personal identifier information and other sensitive information in any document filed with the courts, electronically or otherwise, the document becomes a public record as filed.
C. Filing of Documents under Seal

A. Any party may request of the court that any pleading, paper, exhibit or other document be sealed and a redacted version filed for the public record.

B. Any party may, with leave of court, file a document under seal containing personal identification information.

1. The party seeking to file a document with personal identification information shall file a motion to file the document under seal.

2. If the motion is granted, the filer shall submit the original and one copy of the unredacted document to the Clerk in a clearly identified envelope. The document shall contain the notation “Document filed under seal by Order dated_______”.

3. The assigned judge shall require the filer to file a redacted copy for the public record. The redacted pleading or other paper shall be clearly identified as a redacted version. The redacted pleading shall be a public record as filed.

¶3 Rules for the District Courts of the State of Oklahoma, Rule 31, shall be created by this order and shall take effect_______. This Order shall be published three times in the Oklahoma Bar Journal.

¶4 DONE BY ORDER OF THE SUPREME COURT IN CONFERENCE THIS______ DAY OF 2011.

We understand a yardstick is used throughout education to measure how one school stacks up against another; how test scores determine a student’s worth; how extracurricular activities are used to build a portfolio. But we fundamentally disagree with making your child our statistic. While we will confidently tell you that 100 percent of our students are college-bound where they then achieve on average a 3.40 GPA, we will not tell you that your child is a number to us. This is because our numbers are low, with an 8:1 student:teacher ratio. Our faculty knows your child, knows their strengths, their weaknesses, their dreams and aspirations. Where your confident child meets our inspired educators is where we place value. That’s how we measure an education’s worth.
THE 2011
OKLAHOMA CRIMINAL DEFENSE LAWYERS ASSOCIATION
AWARDS FOR EXCELLENCE IN CRIMINAL DEFENSE

Each year your peers in the practice of criminal defense select three of their own to receive the most prestigious awards for excellence in criminal defense achievements in Oklahoma. These awards are the only statewide awards that are nominated and selected by attorneys that practice criminal defense in Oklahoma. The awards are as follows:

The Clarence Darrow Award

Clarence Darrow was born in Ohio in 1857. After being admitted to the bar in 1878, he became a small town lawyer for nine years.

During WWI he defended anti-war activists and was critical of The Espionage Act that was used to stifle anti-war activities. You need only mention the names of his famous cases to realize his impact on criminal defense; the Scopes Monkey Trial, the Scottsboro 9 and the Leopold-Loeb Murder Trials. A 1936 FBI memo to Clyde Tolson, aide-de-camp to J. Edgar Hoover, gave Mr. Hoover some quotes that Clarence Darrow had made in an article entitled Attorney for the Defendant. It was suggested that Mr. Hoover could use these quotes in speeches to point out how unscrupulous criminal lawyers stimulate disrespect for law and influence crime conditions.

The award recognizes the efforts of an individual who has, during the year, exemplified the zealous criminal defense advocacy that befits the namesake of the award "Clarence Darrow". It is in the deeds and spirit of Clarence Darrow that this award is given each year for the zealous criminal defense advocacy by an individual attorney. The only qualification requirement is that the event(s) upon which the nomination is based must have taken place during the current year.

The Lord Thomas Erskine Award

Lord Erskine was a Scotsman, the third son of the 10th Earl of Buchan, educated at Edinburgh and Cambridge and called to the bar in 1778. He was a strong advocate and defender of popular liberties and constitutional rights. His defense of Thomas Paine cost him his post of attorney general to the Prince of Wales.

The award is given to honor a member of the criminal defense bar who has over the years steadfastly placed the preservation of personal liberties over his or her own personal gain or reputation.

The award is a cumulative year award and is not limited to any particular activities in any given year.

The Thurgood Marshall Appellate Advocacy Award

Thurgood Marshall, the grandson of a slave, was born in 1908 in Maryland. In 1930, he was denied admission to the University of Maryland Law School due to the fact he was black. This event was to direct his future professional life.

In 1934, he began his association with the NAACP and dismantled school segregation in his 1954 victory of Brown vs. Board of Education of Topeka. He later desegregated graduate schools with his victory in Mclaurin vs. Oklahoma State Regents. As a Justice for the Court of Appeals for the 2nd Circuit, he made 112 rulings that were all upheld before the United States Supreme Court. As Solicitor General for the United States, he won 14 of 19 cases argued before the United States Supreme Court. In 1967, Thurgood Marshall was the first African American appointed to the United States Supreme Court. He was often the lone voice of dissent against the death penalty and always spoke for voiceless Americans in his opinions. He died in 1993.

The only qualification for the awards is that the nominee must be the appellate attorney of record in the decision that formed the basis of the nomination. However, there is no requirement that the decision must have occurred within the current year.

Please submit written nominations and the reasons therefore to:

BY MAIL: OCDLA, P.O. Box 2272, Oklahoma City, OK 73101
FAX TO: (405) 212 5024
EMAIL TO: bdp@for-the-defense.com

The deadline is October 21, 2011. The awards will be announced prior to the OBA Convention and awarded at the OCDLA Annual Meeting on November 3, 2011 at 1:30 p.m. You do not have to be a member of OCDLA to nominate an individual.

Awards not received by October 21, 2011 at the OCDLA PO Box or fax # will not be considered.
Last month I wrote about the Annual Meeting and this edition has plenty of information that is supplied in much better form than I could provide. So, I thought I would talk about some other stuff going on at the Oklahoma Bar Association.

Right now, besides gearing up for the Annual Meeting we are in preparation for the Veterans Free Legal Clinics to be conducted statewide on Veterans Day this year. Your county bar president has already been contacted and the many counties have responded positively to the request to put on a clinic. The OBA did a test clinic in Muskogee a few weeks ago and it was very successful. I had the opportunity to attend and can promise you that the clinics will be well organized with the turn key “Clinic in a Box” supplied by the OBA. The “Box” was made possible by a grant from the Oklahoma Bar Foundation. Thanks to the OBF for helping us supply the materials for this great project. If your county bar is not already on board, please consider doing this. From my first-hand experience, I am certain you will have a good time doing this and leave feeling better for the effort. It is a good thing. Do it.

We are also gearing up for dues and MCLE reporting. Every year we end up charging late fees or suspending members who just “forget.” Please be watching for the MCLE email that advises you of your status. If you do not have a current email with the OBA you are missing out on a great feature. Also, every year I hear members complain that they moved and did not get notice of dues or MCLE because they moved and did not alert the OBA of the new address. Oklahoma Supreme Court rules require OBA members to provide the OBA with a current address. It is easy to go online and change your address. If you have moved please make sure you get us your new address quickly. We cannot assure that the post office will forward your dues statement or MCLE communications. In less than one minute you can update your information and perhaps save yourself hundreds of dollars in late fees, penalties and reinstatement fees.

Of course the Annual Meeting has big-time CLE this year. If for some reason you miss the Annual Meeting CLE, there are many great opportunities from now until the end of the year. You should have gotten the really slick magazine the CLE department put out this year. I read one of the programs and was so impressed that I signed up and attended. Once again, the options are many: come in person, go online and watch live or watch one or more of the achieved programs at your leisure.

Technology is great. However, it is not perfect. If you encounter any difficulties in paying dues or signing up for CLE online, we want to hear from you. We love hearing from our members and we want to give you good service. We have tested the systems and they are in good form. However, sometimes the gremlins do slip in. We are here in person to assist you with any needs you may have.

I am looking forward to seeing you at the Annual Meeting.
Mobile technology remains a hot topic.

Just this month, Apple announced a new iPhone, the iPhone 4S with Siri — the voice-activated data assistant and a much improved camera. Apple also set the official launch of its iCloud service on Oct. 12. This personal cloud service will bring a user’s iTunes and Apple’s Photo Stream to the cloud. Users can also store files on the service via Documents in the Cloud. The iCloud service makes all of a user’s content and documents available across all of his or her mobile devices, including iPhones, iPads, iPods, Macintosh computers and PCs.

As I understand it, this version of iCloud doesn’t let one use Microsoft Word or WordPerfect to save or edit these documents. So most lawyers will not find this development overly interesting for business use. Having your iTunes music and video collection available on all of your devices without physically syncing the device will undoubtedly sound great to iTunes subscribers. Apple has released its API to developers so these other word processors may be compatible with iCloud at some point.

It is pretty clear now that tablet devices like the iPad are going to dominate hardware sales for consumers. This will be one of the major factors that drives cloud computing and online data storage. Since smartphones and tablets are currently priced according to gigabytes of storage, one can save on the initial purchase price by buying the cheapest unit and storing most files and data in the cloud rather than on the phone’s drive. Accessing it will be almost as speedy as from the phone as long as you have a 3G connection.

Lawyers remain rightfully concerned about protecting confidential client information. Some lawyers will never be comfortable with storing client data on any cloud-based service. That is perfectly acceptable and understandable. But it is also clear that the trends are moving toward cloud data storage.

OBA Ethics Counsel Travis Pickens published an article discussing these issues about a year ago in the Oklahoma Bar Journal, see Pickens, “Ethics Up in the Clouds,” 81 OBJ 29, 2407-2411 (2010).

You can also download this article by Travis Pickens from my blog at http://jimcalloway.typepad.com/files/ethics-up-in-the-clouds.pickens.oklabarj.pdf.

I have communicated with several lawyers in Oklahoma who are now using the cloud-based practice management system Clio, www.goclio.com/.

They really like the convenience of having their complete office interface and all files accessible from any computer or mobile device.

I am sure there are other Oklahoma lawyers using the other cloud-based practice management solutions, Rocker-Matter or HoudiniEsq. I just have not heard from them yet.

My point is that while you may be a bit cautious about your law practice files moving to the cloud, we all have many documents associated with our personal lives that are not confidential and do not contain any birth dates, account numbers or a social security number. Using a home scanner to store them in the cloud gets them out of your way and also means you can instantly access them from a smartphone, tablet or computer should the need arise. A Magic Marker kept close to the scanner can handle any needed redaction.

But there is real value in storing personal items safely online. If you are given a sports schedule for your child, you can scan it to Dropbox and have ready access. Then you can use Dropbox to send another parent who lost their schedule a link to download your copy. From recipes to warranties to any hand-written note, scan it, file it and you will always have access to it until you decide to delete it. If you are in an organization and are given the 20-page membership directory, you probably will not take the time to enter each address into your contacts database. But scanning the directory and uploading it to your online storage means you can find all members’ phone numbers or addresses if you need them.

While Dropbox is the best known among these online document repositories, there are many others, including Box.net, SpiderOak.com, Sugar Sync and Windows Live SkyDrive, to name but a few. One lawyer-blogger greatly prefers SpiderOak because he, and only he, has the encryption key and therefore the ability to unlock the files. See http://hytechlawyer.com/?p=511. Files are encrypted on Dropbox as well, but in a way where Dropbox employees can unlock them. My guess is Dropbox will expand those options in the future.

When you are working from different locations, online document repositories with file synchronization is great. No more emailing a document home to work on it later with file synchronization. For articles and papers that are being created and revised, you can have the single current version available to you via several computers, your smartphone and tablet.

Most of these services are free for a basic allotment of online storage. While one could easily upload enough pictures or music to fill the free allotment quickly, documents take up much less space and, once you have uploaded enough of those to fill your free allotment, you probably should be paying the modest monthly or annual fee anyway.

Anytime you have to trust a third party with your data, it is a matter for concern whether it is the night cleaning crew at the office, a new employee or an online document repository. But for junior’s basketball schedule or grandma’s stew recipe, there is little cause for concern. Learning to use these tools is good experience, if for no other reason than your clients will be using them and perhaps not as cautiously as a lawyer might. Some small businesses have already converted their files to cloud storage. Their lawyer should ask them what the backup plan is if the vendor suddenly goes out of business.
The Supreme Court of Oklahoma has the sole, nondelegable, constitutional responsibility to regulate the practice, ethics, licensure and discipline of lawyers. Their opinions regarding application of the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct are the ultimate answer on any question. In the meantime, practitioners rely upon guidance from my office, or ethics opinions from the Oklahoma Legal Ethics Advisory panel, treatises, ABA articles and the like, or simply their own research. All such guidance is advisory and non-binding.

Another such source of guidance that appears to be little known is the ABA’s Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility, and the formal ethics opinions they issue. The committee produces ethics opinions pertaining to the ABA’s Model Rules of Professional Conduct, most of which are valuable to Oklahoma lawyers as the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct were adapted directly from the Model Rules.

Another such source of guidance that appears to be little known is the ABA’s Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility, and the formal ethics opinions they issue. The committee produces ethics opinions pertaining to the ABA’s Model Rules of Professional Conduct, most of which are valuable to Oklahoma lawyers as the Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct were adapted directly from the Model Rules.

The Standing Committee has recently issued four new formal opinions, relating to direct communication between parties, duties regarding email communications and renegotiating an attorney fee. This article will focus on the most interesting opinion discussing party to party communications, one which will have broad application to litigators and transactional lawyers involved in negotiations. Brief synopses of the other opinions are included at the end of this article. You should read them all, especially Formal Opinion 11-459 which advises a lawyer under Model Rule 1.6 (a) typically has a duty to warn his or her client that a third party (say, an employer) may have a right to locate and read emails on the employee’s business computer or other device.

It states:

In representing a client, a lawyer shall not communicate about the subject of the representation with a person the lawyer knows to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the lawyer has the consent of the other lawyer or is authorized to do so by law or a court order.

(The Oklahoma version of 4.2 is identical.)

The committee’s summary of the opinion states:

Parties to a legal matter have the right to communicate directly with each other. A lawyer may advise a client of that right and may assist the client regarding the substance of any proposed communication. The lawyer’s assistance need not be prompted by a request from the client. Such assistance may not, however, result in overreaching by the lawyer.

The purpose of the rule of course is to keep parties from making enforceable obligations, admissions or divulging confidential information without the benefit of their own counsel’s advice. Lawyers do not often know whether or how they can assist a client with these communications. We know that parties may speak directly to each other, but we are not sure how and to what extent counsel may be involved in the planning and strategy of those communications.

The ABA committee concluded the lawyer may advise the client about the content of the communications that the client proposes to have with the represented person. For example, the lawyer may review, redraft and approve a letter or a set of talking points. The lawyer may also draft the basic terms of a proposed settlement agreement, or even more remarkably, a formal agreement ready for execution. But, it went on to say that the lawyer must not overreach and this is where you should pay particular attention. Examples of overreaching would include “assisting the client in securing from the represented person an enforceable obligation, disclosure of confidential information, or admissions against interest without the opportunity to seek the advice of counsel.” At a minimum, a lawyer must advise her client to “encourage the other party to consult with counsel before entering into obligations, making admissions or disclosing confidential information.” The opinion further advises that “[i]f counsel has drafted a proposed agreement for the client to deliver to her represented adversary for execution, counsel should include in such agreement conspicuous language on the signature page that warns the other party to consult with his lawyer before signing the agreement.”

It would be wise to cover communications between your client and the opposing party carefully in person and in writing, when you first begin representation. Make sure you and your client know and respect the boundaries. As an Oklahoma lawyer, my practical counsel is to proceed very carefully, and more conservatively than the outer bounds of this opinion, at least until there is some specific Oklahoma guidance. There is not a recent Oklahoma ethics opinion on this precise point, although Comment [4] to ORPC Rule 4.2 states “[p]arties to a matter may communicate directly with each other, and a lawyer is not prohibited from advising a client concerning a communication that the client is legally entitled to make.” I foresee many opportunities for argument and accusations regarding the motives and methods used by a client and lawyer in obtaining admissions, information, and especially executed settlements from the opposing party that have not been provided to the opposing lawyer in advance, no matter how conspicuous the “warning” language on the document. I also foresee the potential for related bar complaints, warranted or not.

As a defensive precaution, you should counsel your clients to never agree, admit or divulge anything without the benefit of your prior advice, no matter what they are presented by the opposing party. Do not let them be surprised and sign something without your review; it may be enforceable, and could lead to an awkward moment for you later. Again, cover this orally and in your written materials that you prepare and provide to the client at the beginning of representation.

Look for new opinions from the ABA; there are a few each year. Be sure to compare the Model Rule with our own version of it. There may be significant differences. Other ABA formal ethics opinions released this year include:

- Formal Opinion 11-460: duty when a lawyer receives copies of a third-party’s email communication with counsel. (Generally, the employer’s lawyer has no duty to notify opposing counsel when the employer locates the employee’s private emails in a business email file or the employee’s workplace computer under Rule 4.4 (b).)

- Formal Opinion 11-459: duty to protect the confidentiality of email communications with one’s client. (Generally, a lawyer sending or receiving substantive communications with a client via email or other electronic means ordinarily must warn the client about the risk of sending or receiving electronic communications using a computer or other device, or email account, where there is a significant risk that a third party may gain access.)

- Formal Opinion 11-458: changing fee arrangements during representation. (Generally, fee agreements may be modified, if reasonable under the circumstances and accepted by the client.)

These opinions are available through the ABA website at www.americanbar.org, or a Google search. These synopses are provided for the convenience of the reader. Oklahoma laws, court rules, regulations, Oklahoma Rules of Professional Conduct and related opinions are controlling.

The Annual Meeting is just around the corner. As members of the Oklahoma Bar Association we have a duty to support our association with our presence. And why not? You will enjoy it and good things will happen. OBA President Deborah Reheard will lead a successful event. She has devoted so much this year to benefit our association and deserves our support. Plan to attend the OBF Fellows Reception on Wednesday, Nov. 2 from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the beautiful downtown law offices of Jones Gotcher & Bogan. I look forward to seeing you there!

The Annual Meeting theme is A Tradition of Pride. The Oklahoma Bar Foundation has a tradition also — A Tradition of Giving Back. As a member of the OBA you are automatically a member of the OBF. You can certainly be proud of the OBF. As a member of a proud profession should you support its tradition and its mission? Of course the answer must be a YES, I WILL! This year, at the time of this writing — despite the woes in the economy and the financial markets — your bar foundation awarded grants in the amount of $436,000 in addition to scholarships of $40,900, out-of-cycle grants of $4,000, and court grants of $119,297 to total $600,197 covering 38 programs or projects. These grants mark passage of $10,119,602 for total grants awarded since the OBF was established.

The list gives grant details. Bear in mind that grant applicants must provide detailed information, financial and other to qualify. Vetting is a diligent process with the Grants and Awards Committee, ably led again this year by Judge Valerie Couch. Vigilance continues as committee members and board members make site visits. Grant recipients are also required to provide additional reports as a condition to the delivery of funds and recipients must credit the OBF in their programs and publications.

However, the OBF cannot sustain this effort without your support. If you are a Fellow you are already committed, but please encourage others to become Fellows. Only about 11 percent of our members have stepped up to give back as Fellows. It is easy. There is an application form right here in the bar journal. It is not expensive. A commitment of only $100 per year over 10 years. However, many Fellows become Sustaining Fellows by continuing with the annual support. Newly admitted attorneys are able to be Fellows at a reduced rate. Many Fellows elevate their support to be premier Benefactor Fellows at $300 per year.

By the way, we all have an easy way to provide additional support to OBF by simply making an additional gift on the annual OBA dues statement. Please consider making a gift to OBF today.

I recently received a letter from Col. David W. Penczar, staff judge advocate at Tinker Air Force Base in Midwest City. Col. Penczar took the time to write in order to offer his appreciation for our representation of service members and veterans through the Oklahoma Lawyers for America’s Heroes program. In the letter he said, “Our service members, veterans and their families are a true national treasure. These groups encounter the same legal problems that are unique to their status. The Oklahoma Bar Association’s initiative to ‘fill the gap’ in services offered by uniformed lawyers is one that is timely and important. The Oklahoma Lawyers for America’s Heroes program provides a significant resource for legal advice and assistance to those who serve our nation.”

I was honored to get this letter and to know that our time and effort is making a difference to those service members who need us, but it also serves as a reminder that it is time for me to rally the troops once again.

This Veterans Day, Nov. 11, we are calling on all county bar associations to host legal clinics aimed at expanding our reach to even more of the men and women who serve or have served our country.

For many of these service members, just getting the opportunity to talk one-on-one with a lawyer can relieve a huge burden. Our guard, reserves, active duty and veterans often do not have the resources, financial or otherwise, to seek and retain legal counsel.

As Oklahoma lawyers, our expertise in the law can be a lifeline. Through the Oklahoma Lawyers for America’s Heroes program, we want to assist your local bar association in establishing a veterans legal clinic to provide assistance to those in your community who are serving and have served their country honorably.

The OBA, Oklahoma Bar Foundation and OBA Young Lawyers Division are working together to provide your county bar association with the resources it will need to host a veterans legal clinic. We have combined efforts to put together a “Clinic in a Box” — a box containing forms, supplies, signage, everything you need to host a clinic. It also includes two excellent pamphlets put together by the YLD — one for lawyers and one for veterans — filled with resources to help in answering veterans’ legal questions.

We also recently produced a video which captures the essence of this program and what we are trying to accomplish. The video has been distributed to county bar presidents across the state. I hope they will use it not only to promote this program to members, but also show it to civic, church or social groups as yet another example of how lawyers are leaders in their communities.

My hope is that all county bars will commit to hosting a clinic, either individually or jointly with other area counties, this Veterans Day.

Thank you is not enough for these men and women who have sacrificed so much. Will you help?

Ms. Reheard practices in Eufaula and serves as OBA president.
The University of Tulsa College of Law students proudly serve their school, their community and their profession. During the 2010-2011 academic year, students donated 3,491 hours of their time to various public service causes. From animal shelters and food banks to government agencies and legal nonprofits, students participated in several worthwhile programs and worked in a variety of settings to benefit the public good. Two of our most recent service projects include the Foundation of Legal Studies Public Service Day and the Let Us Read Foundation. Additionally, we continue to blaze new trails with the TU Law Boesche Legal Clinic’s Immigrant Rights project, an effort that helps those seeking political asylum to become U.S. citizens.

TU Law prides itself on introducing the value of public service to our law students early in their legal careers. During first-year law students’ orientation, called Foundations of Legal Study, students have the opportunity to give back to our local community through Public Service Day, which is an important way for first-year students to take their first steps into the profession. From the outset, we strive that service to the community is at the core of being a legal professional, and Public Service Day is a way to emphasize that and make a real difference in people’s lives.

This year’s event on Sept. 1, involved the entire incoming first-year class, faculty, staff, upperclassmen and TU Law Dean Janet Levit, donating their time at the Kendall Whitter Food Pantry and G.R.O.W. Garden, Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma and Goodwill Industries. While logging 340 hours of service and with 108 first-year students leading the way, the TU law contingent was able to make a significant contribution by sorting and repackaging food items; processing, packaging and hanging donated clothes — mowing, picking weeds and performing other gardening chores.

TU law upperclassmen are also leading by example by taking their own initiative with public service efforts. TU College of Law student Mbilike Mwafurilwa has launched the Let Us Read Foundation to help children in his native country of Malawi in southeastern Africa. The purpose of the Let Us Read Foundation is to provide books to schools in Malawi lacking such basic resources. Malawi is one of the world’s poorer countries, and its education system reflects that. Classroom supplies, including books, are sparse, and classes are overcrowded (often more than 100 pupils per class).

The genesis of the foundation began when a childhood friend from Malawi asked Mwafurilwa to donate two books, but Mwafurilwa decided that was too little and thought he could collect 2,000. He and fellow TU law students Mark Smith, executive vice president of the foundation, and Arthur Loyd, ...Mbilike Mwafurilwa has launched the Let Us Read Foundation to help children in his native country of Malawi in southeastern Africa.

fundraising and marketing director of the foundation, became involved and decided to incorporate the foundation in Oklahoma as a nonprofit, with Mwafulirwa as president. They are now in the process of applying for 501(c)(3) income tax exempt status from the IRS. TU law student Blake Feamster serves as vice president of logistics and collections for the foundation. The foundation has shipped more than 2,000 books to Malawi. To make donations, visit letusreadfoundation.org.

In the five years of our Immigrant Rights Project, more than 70 clients have been granted some form of legal immigration status. Under the direction of professor Elizabeth McCormick, the clinic is a valuable resource for people who have legal immigration issues but who have little financial resources. The clinic is also an important venue allowing our law students to gain practical legal experience.

This past year, law students Meghan King, Lindsey Christopher, Eric Reynolds, Pedro Mari, Amy Gioletti, Lenora Gulley, Hans Lehr, Amanda Cornell, Pegi Haddock, Lorena Tiemann, Sean Dooley and Matt Williams produced results for clients: A Pakistani human rights worker targeted by the Taliban was granted asylum. Four Mexican victims of violent crimes were granted U Visas, a special visa for crime victims who provide assistance to law enforcement, enabling the clients to remain in the U.S. A Mexican client was granted relief under the Violence Against Women Act, saving her years of delay waiting for an immigrant visa and putting her on the path to becoming a U.S. citizen. A Haitian national who had been a legal permanent resident of the United States for more than 20 years was allowed to stay in the country with his U.S. citizen children and their disabled mother after a stay for removal was filed and his conviction was vacated.

In summary, the above projects represent a piece of TU Law’s commitment to public service, and we always seek new ideas on how our law students can make a difference. Please feel free to contact me with any comments or questions at christy-caves@utulsa.edu or (918) 631-2890.

It’s Election Time!
2012 YLD Leadership

The YLD again has a full slate of candidates running for Board of Directors positions, so let your voice be heard and exercise your right to vote!

Elections will be conducted electronically. YLD members will receive an email from the OBA with your ballot attached. The email address used is the one currently on file with the OBA. If you do not have a current email address on file with the OBA, you can access a paper-based ballot on the YLD website, www.okbar.org/yld.

Your OBA number is required to identify if you are a qualified voter, and your address on file with the OBA will be used to determine your district. Elections are conducted based on Oklahoma judicial districts, and you may only vote for officers, candidates for election in your district, and at-large candidates. Nonconforming ballots will be stricken.

All ballots must be submitted to the Nominating Committee by 5 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 28. Election results will be announced at the YLD Annual Meeting held in Tulsa on Wednesday, Nov. 2, at 6 p.m., in conjunction with the OBA Annual Meeting.

If you have any questions, please contact Nominating Committee Chairperson Molly Aspan, at Hall Estill, 320 S. Boston, Suite 200, Tulsa, 74103, or by email at maspan@hallestill.com.

Immediate Past Chairperson

Roy D. Tucker is the current YLD chair. He has served in various capacities on the YLD Board of Directors since 2005, including the officer positions of secretary and treasurer in 2009 and 2010, respectively. He is a previous YLD award winner for Outstanding Director (2006; 2007) and Outstanding Officer (2009; 2010). He also serves on various OBA committees, including the Membership Survey Task Force and the Audit Committee. Most recently, he accepted a three-year term as trustee of the Oklaho-
The following persons have been nominated. They are running uncontested and will be declared elected at the Annual Meeting of the OBA Young Lawyers Division.

Joe Vorndran
Chairperson-Elect

Joe Vorndran is a partner with the Shawnee law firm of Stuart, Clover, Duran, Thomas & Vorndran LLP. His practice is focused on general civil litigation, corporate law and municipal law. He received his B.A. from OU in May 2003, where he was a member of the OU Scholars program, Order of Omega Honor Fraternity and numerous other campus committees. He received his J.D. from OU College of Law in May 2006, where he was a class representative, on the Dean’s Council and a member of the SBA Board of Governors. He was admitted to practice law before all Oklahoma state courts in September 2006.

He has served as the YLD District Eight representative since 2006 and chairs the Children and the Law Committee. He has served as YLD treasurer since 2011 and is an active volunteer for the Oklahoma Bar Foundation Mock Trial Program. He attended the 2007 OBA Leadership Conference and was a delegate to the 2009-2010 OBA Leadership Academy. OBA Member Appointed Corporation Commissioner

Gov. Mary Fallin recently announced Patrice Douglas of Edmond has been appointed to serve on the Oklahoma Corporation Commission. She replaces outgoing Commissioner Jeff Cloud, also an OBA member, who resigned in September.

Ms. Douglas currently serves as mayor of Edmond, a post she has held since April 2009. She will resign her position to serve on the commission. She also serves as executive vice president of First Fidelity Bank in Edmond, where she leads the commercial lending team at four branches in Edmond and north Oklahoma City. She practiced law for 13 years including serving as a staff attorney for Supreme Court Justice Hardy Summers. She earned her law degree from the OU College of Law.

The Corporation Commission has judicial, legislative and regulatory authority over a number of sectors of the Oklahoma economy, including the transportation, energy and telecommunications industries as well as public utilities.

“The Oklahoma Corporation Commission impacts our economy on many levels through its oversight and regulation of a variety of industries,” Gov. Fallin said. “As a small business owner, banker, accomplished attorney and proven leader at the state and local level, Patrice will be an excellent addition as Oklahoma’s newest commissioner. She has proven herself to be a committed public servant and a student of the policy issues facing Oklahoma and its citizens. Her dedication, intelligence and experience will make her a strong voice for consumers, ratepayers and another fair and qualified commissioner for the relevant industries to work with.”

OBA Member Nominated for Army General Counsel

President Obama recently announced his intent to nominate Brad Carson for general counsel of the Army, Department of Defense. Mr. Carson is currently an associate professor of business law at the University of Tulsa, where he is also director of the National Energy Policy Institute. He served as the U.S. representative for the Second District of Oklahoma during the 107th and 108th Congresses. From 2009 to 2010, he served in Iraq on active military duty, for which he was awarded the Bronze Star. Prior to his deployment, he served as president, CEO and business development director for Cherokee Nation Businesses LLC. He joined that organization in 2005 following a one-year fellowship at the Harvard University Institute of Politics. From 1997 to 1998, he was a White House fellow and worked as a special assistant to the secretary of defense for special projects at the Department of Defense. His legal career began in 1994 at Crowe & Dunlevy, where he worked as an antitrust attorney. He is a Rhodes Scholar and an officer in the U.S. Navy Reserve. He holds a B.A. from Baylor University, an M.A. from Trinity College at Oxford University and a J.D. from OU College of Law.

Reinstatement

The following OBA member suspended by the Supreme Court Order has complied with the requirements for reinstatement, and notice is hereby given of such reinstatement:

Kristen Anne Hilty
OBA No. 21214
P. O. Box 722334
Norman, OK 73070

Judge Tom Thornbrugh of Tulsa has been appointed by Gov. Mary Fallin to fill the vacancy on the Oklahoma Court of Civil Appeals District Three.

Since 1997, Judge Thornbrugh has served as district court judge for the 14th Judicial District and currently serves as presiding judge. He has presided over more than 200 jury trials involving civil and criminal felony matters.

“The Oklahoma Court of Civil Appeals plays an important role in ensuring our court system provides fair and just treatment for all,” Gov. Fallin said. “Judge Thornbrugh has had a distinguished career in both private practice and on the bench. I know in his new role on the Court of Civil Appeals, Judge Thornbrugh will be committed to ensuring our citizens receive fair treatment under the law.”

Before being appointed to the district court, he spent more than 20 years in private law practice in Tulsa. He also served as prosecuting attorney for the city of Bixby and as a municipal court judge for the city of Tulsa. He also served as a legislative advisor for U.S. Senator Dewey Bartlett. He earned dual degrees in speech and political science from Emporia State University in Emporia, Kan. He earned a law degree from TU, where he was a member of the Dean’s Honor Roll and Res Nova law review. He is a member of the Oklahoma Judicial Conference, where he serves on the Conference Executive Board, the president of the Council of Presiding Judges, and on the conference’s legislative committee. He also is an adjunct professor at TU and at St. Gregory’s University.

Open Meetings, Open Records to be Subject of Workshop Series

Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt is inviting OBA members to attend one of a series of workshops designed to educate public officials, agency employees and board members about the state’s Open Meetings and Open Records acts. The seminars are presented in conjunction with the Oklahoma Press Association and are free and open to the public. The workshops will run from 1 – 4 p.m. in the following cities:

- Oct. 17, Muskogee, Bedouin Shrine
- Nov. 7, Oklahoma City, Metro Technology Center
- Nov. 14, Woodward, High Plains Technology Center
- Dec. 5, Tulsa, Tulsa Technology Center – Riverside
- Dec. 12, Lawton, Great Plains Technology Center

Florida Justice Shares Vision for Model Civics Program

On Sept. 29 Florida Supreme Court Justice R. Fred Lewis spoke to Oklahoma education leaders and legal professionals at the Oklahoma Justice Center about a successful civic program he started in his home state. With him are, from left, SCOPE Chair Suzanne Heggy, President-Elect Cathy Christensen and President Deborrah Reheard. Alarmed at people’s lack of knowledge about the American justice system, Justice Lewis started a statewide civic education effort to reach out to public schools. Five years later his Justice Teaching Program now involves 4,500 volunteer lawyers and judges donating at least two hours each month at every school in Florida. Sharing concern about the decline of civic engagement and political apathy, OBA President-Elect Cathy Christensen of Oklahoma City has decided to place special emphasis on law-related education during her upcoming presidential year, with particular attention paid to the role of the courts. She said the OBA envisions duplicating the Florida model to provide a service to Oklahoma students.
Atkinson, Haskins, Nellis, Brittingham, Gladd & Carwile announce Keith A. Bartsch was elected president of the Muscogee (Creek) Nation Bar Association at the association’s annual meeting in Tulsa. The association is comprised of over 350 attorneys throughout Oklahoma and the U.S. who are admitted to practice before the courts of the Muscogee (Creek) Nation. Mr. Bartsch is a litigation associate at the firm. His practice area is federal/tribal Indian law, insurance defense and catastrophic personal injury.

The Fellows of the American Bar Foundation recently selected Crowe & Dunlevy attorney Karen Rieger as a foundation Fellow. She joined the firm in 1981 and serves as the chair of the firm’s healthcare practice group. She serves on a number of civic and charitable boards, including the Oklahoma Cerebral Palsy Commission and the Catholic Foundation of Oklahoma. She is former adjunct professor of healthcare law at the OU Oklahoma College of Law, past president and current director of the Oklahoma Health Lawyers Association.

At the Podium

Attorney Eric L. Johnson presented the American Bar Association’s consumer financial services program at its annual meeting, held in Toronto. During the program titled “Dodd Frank’s Regulatory Triangle: Love or Bermuda?”, Mr. Johnson shed light on the complex layers of interaction and coordination recently created between the new Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and the myriad of federal and state agencies involved with supervision, examination and enforcement actions.

Jim Banowsky recently spoke in Moscow, Russia, at a conference on intellectual property in emerging markets. Mr. Banowsky spoke on the topic of “Managing Microsoft’s International Patent Portfolio.”

Jon Cartledge of Johnson & Jones PC, was featured as the keynote speaker at the Rogers County Bar Association’s Aug. 26 meeting. Mr. Cartledge, who heads the Johnson & Jones legal research, writing, and appellate division, presented a CLE titled “Time to Pay the Piper: Indemnity and Contribution Law in Oklahoma.”

How to place an announcement: The Oklahoma Bar Journal welcomes short articles or news items about OBA members and upcoming meetings. If you are an OBA member and you’ve moved, become a partner, hired an associate, taken on a partner, received a promotion or an award, or given a talk or speech with statewide or national stature, we’d like to hear from you. Sections, committees, and county bar associations are encouraged to submit short stories about upcoming or recent activities. Honors bestowed by other publications (e.g., Super Lawyers, Best Lawyers, etc.) will not be accepted as announcements (Oklahoma-based publications are the exception.) Information selected for publication is printed at no cost, subject to editing, and printed as space permits.

Mutt Inspires Bar Charity Event

By Blake E. Lynch

This story, like so many others before it, starts with a lonely and bored wife, left at home by her husband, who was taking off for a week with the guys. Over a year ago I decided to take a “man”cation with two of my oldest friends to North Carolina. Of course, the first rule of the trip was no wives allowed. I was allowed to take the trip only after some begging, but I assumed all would be well. I was leaving my wife, Amanda, with our trusted and loyal — though not very cuddly — German shepherd, Gertrude.

It wasn’t long before I started getting long winded voicemails about the loneliness my wife was experiencing, and how Gertrude, while great at fetch, was not the best dog to keep her company. I disregarded these pleas to my own peril. On the afternoon of our second day of “man” trip, I went for a run and returned to see my two buddies laughing. When I asked the cause of this outburst I was told that my wife had called from a local puppy adoption drive and asked them if they thought I would mind if she adopted a red headed mutt named Sasha. They of course replied that she could do it and I would not mind at all — a lie that they perpetuated for their own comic relief.

Well, a year later Sasha has been renamed Olie, and although I believe that any adoption should require the consent of all homeowners, I disregarded these pleas to my own peril. On the afternoon of our second day of “man” trip, I went for a run and returned to see my two buddies laughing. When I asked the cause of this outburst I was told that my wife had called from a local puppy adoption drive and asked them if they thought I would mind if she adopted a red headed mutt named Sasha. They of course replied that the local PAWS (Partners for Animal Welfare Society) organizations in Pittsburg and Latimer counties.

The Pittsburg County Bar Association has also sponsored a charity stair climbing event, fundraisers and other events to help in the community of McAlester and beyond. These events have raised thousands of dollars for local and statewide charities. When I look at my poor mutt Olie, I like to think that even though she came to my house without my permission or consent, she has helped spark a desire for charity in me, and more importantly in the bar association that has helped so many people. However insignificant an event may seem, it can always spark a greater change. I am sure that in every local bar association in the state, someone has had some small event happen to them that can help spark an interest that might enliven the charitable will in those around them. Hopefully, you can find that event in your county and start something positive to effect change!

Mr. Lynch practices in McAlester.
