

Bill of Rights

When our Founding Fathers wrote the U.S. Constitution, they included a Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights was important because it guaranteed individual rights to the people and the states.

The first ten amendments added to the Constitution are known as the Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights was known to be the added freedom and so everyone always followed these rules of freedom, justice, and independence. I believe that we will always be united with our freedom, injustice, and liberty, and if nothing goes right we can always try our hardest to make it better than ever. I believe that the Bill of Rights was made for independence, justice for all, and liberty so nobody would be slaves and the government had no power over us.
