

The Constitution was a way that the Americans made some of the laws. At the time England was sending out unfair laws that we the Americans didn't like.

In May 1787 a very important thing happened. Some men met in Philadelphia at the Convention. They all might have come from different backgrounds or different color skin but they still came together and wrote the Constitution. I am glad we have the Constitution still today because it gives freedom and peace.

Government leaders show respect for all people in our community or state by listening to people. This could bring your community closer or even make it better.

It is important for people to work together and help each other, even if they have different ideas or backgrounds because it could bring peace to their city or state. If people didn't come together then a lot of laws would not be made. If those laws were not made our country would be a mess. All our freedom comes from the Constitution because men from The writers of the Constitution still came together even if they were different. So can we too.
