

Lindsey Fisher
Covenant Community
4th Grade

As I was preparing for this assignment I ask myself what was the most important attribute of a leader. To me the most important act of a leader is to unite the people. So I began brainstorming ways to unite a class through our differences.

I would start with the beginning of the day. I would have a rule that we be prepared to give our full attention to our teacher as we start our education process for that day. This is important to keep us focused on our studies. You may ask, how does this keep us united? By starting the day all together and prepared we will function as a unified class.

Another way I would protect our differences, is by implementing the next two rules. The first of which is that we all work on the same subject at the same time this would promote teamwork. Team work is important so is helping each other. Another law or rule would be for us to use our different abilities to help each other out. Such as if a person is good at math, they could help a person who is bad at math. The one that was helped has strengths too, and they can use their different abilities to help someone else. And this will help us learn through our differences. Our strength and weaknesses will unite us. Through our unification we become stronger as a class.

As president I would invoke a presidential executive law where a good portion of our day is spent in an outdoor learning center, where we use an agriculture based program to learn about science, economics, home ec., and other studies associated with agriculture. In this program we are going to grow and harvest crops while using this to learn and grow together as a class. We would also raise animals that produce food such as different meats and eggs. Everything that we grow and raise would be used for our breakfasts and lunches. This would also be a way our school could stay healthy and save money.

The last two and most important rules would be first one that protects against fighting and students from using negative words. When people fight it makes others feel worried, scared, and anxious. This doesn't promote a good environment for learning. It is imperative to have a safe and joyful center for education. With these rules it will help us to understand and respect others beliefs and differences.